YALE AND HARVARD PLAYED TO A TIE

Score Nothing to Nothing in Great Game of Season Yesterday.

OTHER GRIDIRON RESULTS

V. M. I. First Southern College to Score on Georgetown—North and South Carolina—A. & M. Defeats Wake Forest.

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 19.—A drawn and scoreless battle was fought on Yale field today between Harvard and Yale. To the adherents of the Blue it was moral victory for their team and proved too strong for the all-powerful Crimson team which came here confident of victory.

When the game which must be reckoned as among the greatest ever fought between these rival univrsities was over the great throng of people took up their homeward journey with mingled emotions, the Yale men supremely happy over what their team had done and the Harvard adherents sad in having victory snatched from their grasp through lost opportunities.

This is the third time that Yale has rallied at the eleventh hour to cheat Harvard of a victory.

Both teams were very strong today on the defense, but Harvard's wonderful mechanicism went to naught owing to costly fumbles, both when it was not a long way to the Yale goal line and when the Crimson was battering her way down towards that coveted place. Poor generalship both times was the trouble for Harvard neglected to rush with downs to spare instead of trying a field goal, which seemed to promise success. These fumbles were the critical points in the game. Failure by two of the backs, Wigglesworth and Corbett to cling to the pigskin in tight places, probably cost Harvard the victory. Yale could not withstand the battering. Once the Harvard rushes were for 33 yards, a first down each time, and in the last period Corbett had carried the ball to the 12 yard line when it went to Yale by bad judgment. Harvard was always the aggressor. Yale made few consistent gains.

Howe, the Yale quarterback, supported the general idea of the Yale defense by constantly punting, and he sent the ball high in the air, giving Kilpatrrick and Brooks, the ends, time to get down under them and tackle the runner. It was the wonderful work of the two ends and field tackling which shone in Yale's game. Yale's line had to bear the brunt of the boring of Wendell was surprisingly compact. Daly was not used a great deal at plunging, owing, it is understood, to a weak knee. He was reserved until the latter part of the game and his opportunity came just before the end when he tried a drop kick from the 35-yard line, but it was reflected by the wind.

As to Harvard the disappointment was the running of the team by quarterback Wigglesworth and the fumbling of the backs. Wagglesworth was twice taken out and Potter and Gardnen were substituted, but the coaches pushed the little quarterback into the game and each time errors in judgment followed. The Harvard team as a whole was the same compact, well drilled team of the whole season, but it lacked at critical times a master hand.

The punting was disappointing as a whole, although in the first period it gave promise of being a feature. Howe did not get his distance and only Felton was able to get telling distance. In the game Harvard punted fifteen times for 620 yards and Howe booted the sphere 20 times for 810 yards. From the spectators point of view the good features of the game were the variety of plays used and the more important fact that the ball could always be seen. The forward pass, which has been hailed as essential for gaining distance was used by Harvard five times. Three tries were failures and the other two only one made a gain and that simply eight yards. Yale did not use the play. Yale's drop kick was matched by one made by Lewis which was a similar failure. The superiority of Harvard over Yale was shown in the rushing, for ten times the Crimson got first down and her work in this style tried 55 times brought gains of 201 yards while Yale getting first down six times tried rushing 37 times for 111 yards.

Yale discarded the on-side kick entirely while Harvard tried it four times as an effective ground gainer.

The game was the shortest of championship football contests, lasting less than an hour and three quarters.

ADMITS SLAYING HER HUSBAND

Broke Down When Parents Were Arrested Charged With the Crime—Occurred at Point Pleasant, W. Va.

Point Pleasant, W. Va., Nov. 19.—Her nerve broken when informed that her father and mother had been placed under arrest at the old homestead in Jackson county charged with complicity in the killing of her husband, Mrs. James Mulholland today confessed she shot him.

Mrs. Mulholland, and her brother had been brought to the Mason county jail here by Sheriff McCowan, of Jackson county, after their arrest in Columbus, Ohio, where they had gone to bury the body of Mulholland, the claim having been made that he had committed suicide. The arrest of the wife and her brother was made in a dramatic manner during the funeral last Thursday. Mrs. Mulholland protested her innocence until informed that her father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Lockart, of Silverton, Jackson county, had been taken into custody and were confined in the Jackson county jail at Ripley. The woman's confession was made to Sheriff McCowan, Detective Rupert Keyser and Jailor Ash Hughes, and the latter's wife.

She said her intentions were to commit suicide in Columbus immediately after the funeral of her husband, that she now made the confession to clear her parents.

Mrs. Mulholland said that no one saw the shooting. She was running in the yard of her father's home with a shot gun in her hand. It struck the corner of the house and was discharged, the load of No. 2 shot striking her husband in the face causing instant death. She then laid the gun across his dead body and reported that he had shot himself.

As she paced her cell today apparently of good cheer, she added that she would rather spend a few years in prison than to live as many with her late husband who, she said, had always ill-treated her.

Mrs. Mulholland will be held here for a few days before being taken to the Jackson county jail. She is 31 years old and says that her husband was the same age to the day.

PROSPEROUS COLUMBUS.

Raising Hogs and Hominy in Plenty —Superior Court—Other Notes.

Whiteville, Nov. 19.—The Star's correspondent has made it his business to interview every farmer who comes to Whiteville, as to the amount of corn and meat raised by himself and neighbors this year. With not a single exception the farmers replied that they did not expect to buy a peck of corn next year, and numbers said they would have corn to sell. Several stated that they had not near used up their last year's crop, and would not have cause to feed an ear of their new crop until after Christmas or in the Spring. A large majority of the farmers stated that they would raise plenty of meat to do them, and a number said they raised meat every year to sell. It is our impression that it will not be necessary next year for Columbus county to import a peck of Western corn, for the surplus, for our farmers will supply the demand of our milling plants and merchants. A number of farmers have this Fall enclosed large areas with woven wire fencing, and have gone extensively into the hog raising business. One farmer said by raising chufas and letting his hogs have range of his fields after the crops are gathered, he raises meat at a cost of three cents a pound.

One of our enterprising Whiteville merchants is considering the matter of putting up a steam corn mill not far from the Court House. There is no mill near town where corn can be ground, and many farmers who are forced to visit the Court House on business would put a sack of corn in their wagon or buggy and have it ground here while waiting. It is a badly needed enterprise, and can be established at a small outlay.

NEGRO SUSPECT ARRESTED.

Richmond County Darkey Held as Knowing More Than He Will Tell.

(Special to Charlotte Observer.)

Hamlet, N. C., Nov. 18.—Berry Graham, colored, was arrested late this afternoon and lodged in the county jail on the suspecion that he knows more than he will tell about the mysterious disappearance of Mr. James A. Cromartie. The negro lives where Mr. Cromartie was last seen making his way towards a swamp. Graham first told of seeing two boys who had found a dead man. The boys were found and knew nothing of the lost man; denied even being in the neighborhood. When Officer Thrice approached Graham again he told a diffrent story, did not know the boys and was generally ignorant. All efforts to trace the old gentleman away from the neighborhood have failed. The surrounding swamps have been thoroughly searched and the circumstances point to foul play and Graham is believed to have knowledge of the end. The motive for foul play would be robbery as Mr. Cromartie had about $50 upon his person when he disappeared.

FOUR MEN KILLED IN GUN EXPLOSION

Fearful Accident Cost Lives of Lieut. Caffee and Three Assistants.

DUE TO FOULED FIRING PIN

Occurred on Proving Grounds of Navy at Indian Head, Md.—Accident—Explained.—Board of Inquiry Has Been Ordered.

Washington, November 19.—By the premature explosion of a five-inch fifty-one calibre gun at the Indian Head, Md., proving grounds of the Navy, four men are dead, including Lieutenant Arthur C. Caffee, who was in charge of the gun, and one man, a negro, seriously injured. The breech block of the gun, which was being tested, blew backward into the crew which was firing the gun.

The explosion probably was due to a bent or fouled firing pin, which projected beyond the face of the breech plug of the gun.

The dead in addition to Lieutenant Caffee, are:

J. L. Brown, battery foreman, instantly killed.

Nelson Jackson, colored, battery attendant, fatally injured and died shortly afterward.

J. J. Leary, ordinance man, fatally injured, died at 11:35 A. M.

Sidney Dyson, colored, a member of the gun crew was seriously injured.

The ordinance bureau has ordered a board of inquiry to develop details of the accident, the only witnesses to which, so far as can be learned, were John C. Coleman and Sidney Dyson, both colored.

The gun which was a new one from the navy yard gun factory and being tested for the first time, had already been fired twice. The accident occurred during the third round just as the breech was being closed.

Lieutenant Arthur Gill Caffee, was born in Missouri, and was attached to the staff of Rear Admiral Schroeder on the Atlantic fleet battleship Connecticut, before he was assigned to duty at Indian Head, as inspector of ordnance. He entered the Naval Academy in 1900. His assistants, who were killed and injured, were all civilians and lived in the neighborhood of the proving grounds, 40 miles from Washington.

Lieutenant Caffee had been on duty at the proving ground since last April. He resided on the Reservation with his wife and one child. His body probably will be interred in the Arlington National Cemetery.

The Naval Ordnance Bureau has been trying for a long time to find some safety device applicable to guns of this calibre, but so far without success and if the gun captain fails to obey the rule to pass his hand over the face of the breech lock before it is closed to detect any improper projection of the firing pin, then just such an accident as occurred today may happen any time, it is said.

Every precaution ordinarily is taken to protect the firing crews from the failure of a new gun under test. It is required that after loading the gun the crew shall retire to a bomb proof house in its rear and discharge the piece by electricity. The trouble in this case lay in the fact that the gun was discharged before the crew had finished loading it. The brass shell containing the powder and the projectile had been inserted in the piece and breech box had swung to one of its hinges. But before the heavy screw threads had interlocked the projecting firing pin struck the primer on the head of the shell and exploded the charge which blew backwards, tearing off the breech block and killing or fatally wounding the crew.

The employes liability act will come into play in this case and the families or dependent parents of the victims of the explosion will receive the equivalent of one year's pay.

OVER 100 SLAIN IN MEXICO

Later Reports From Rioting at Puebla—Troops Continue to Patrol City—Mexico Does Not Fear Uprising.

Mexico City, Nov. 19.—Estimates of the number who were killed in the fight between soldiers and police on the one side and revolutionists on the other at Puebla, continued today to be placed at from 100 to 170. Dispatches from that city stated that it was certain over 100 had been slain in the conflict. Aquiles Gerdan, whose house was the scene of the fight, was killed by soldiers while resisting arrest in a tunnel where he had taken refuge. Gerden fought to the last, firing at the officers as soon as they fund his hiding place.

According to late advices from Puebla there was no fear of further trouble as the troops were in control of the situation. The fighting was confined to the vicinity of the Gerdan house, where a large number of revolutionists had gathered to discuss plans for an uprising scheduled for tomorrow and a large number of guns had been concealed.

GOOD ROADS IN ROBESON.

Association Formed Yesterday.—Reported Fire at Oil Mill.

Lumberton, N. C., Nov. 19.—Pursuant to call a number of citizens from different sections of the county met here today for the purpose of organizing the "Robeson County Good Roads Association." Dr. Jos. Hyde Pratt was present and delivered an able and instructive address. Maj. A. J. McKinnon, of Maxton, was elected president; W. S. Cobb, of Lumber Bridge, vice president; and Mr. A. E. White, of Lumberton, secretary and treasurer. The meeting was an enthusiastic one and every man present had himself enrolled as a member of the Association. It is to be hoped that every citizen in the county will become a member and that everyone will do everything possible toward giving the county good roads. The dues are only $1 per year and that gives to each member a copy of the Southern Good Roads magazine published at Lexington. There are no salaried officers in the Association and only enough dues are charged to cover the cost of printing, postage, etc.

It was reported this afternoon that there was a fire at the oil mill, but upon inquiry, it was learned that no damage had been done. It is thought that a match had in some way gotten into some seed and was ignited while passing through a conveyor. A blaze flared up, but was promptly extinguished.

Some friend of the firm of White & Gough made them a present last night out of the ordinary. A box was found at one of their front doors this morning containing what many declared the largest horn owl they had ever seen. One side of the box was covered with poultry netting and the owl has been viewed by hundreds today, many of whom had never seen an owl before. The firm has been using the picture of an owl on some of their advertising, but now they have the real live thing, which is as vicious as a bull dog and can eat as much raw meat as a hound.

DEATH OF TOLSTOI OCCURS IN RUSSIA

Famous Novelist and Count Passes Away After Long and Severe Illness.

STORY OF HIS NOTABLE CAREER

A Review of Famous Author's Book. Death Followed Long Pilgrimage—Suffered Several Heart Attacks.

Astapova, Nov. 20.—Count Tolstoi is dead.

At 6:05 A. M. Count Leo Tolstoi died peacefully. The Countess Tolstoi, Dr. Makivelsky and other attending physicians were at his side when the end came. It was recognized long before that his case was hopeless and at 5 o'clock in the morning after the Countess had been summoned and the other members of the family had gathered in an adjoining room, the physicians issued a bulletin, announcing that the activity of the heart had almost ceased and that Tolstoi's condition was extremely dangerous.

Several of the physicians were greatly overcome by the approach in death of Russia's great writer. Tolstoi, accompanied only by Dr. Makovelsky left his home for the purpose of ending his days in solitude to which he more and more inclined during his latter years.

Learning that his retreat had been discovered, he insisted upon proceeding on his journey to the caucasus, where he hoped to spend his last days close to the Tolstoian colony on the shores of the Black Sea. But during the railroad journey he was overcome with exhaustion and the cold, and Dr. Makovelsky was compelled to have him transferred to the flag station at Astapova where he was made as comfortable as possible in the rude wooden building.

For five days he has lain there suffering first from bronchitis and later from inflamation of the lungs. Specialists were called from Moscow and other places but notwithstanding their utmost efforts the heart of the great Russian responded but feebly to the restoratives and and stimulants administered.

Count Lyof Nikolaivitch Tolstoi, usaully called Count Leo Holstoi, novelist and social reformer, was born August 28, 1828, at Yasiaya Polonia, in the Province of Tula, Russia. When 23 years old Tolstoi entered the army and served in the Caucasus and in the defense of Sebastopol against the British and French allied forces. He first made a reputation in literature by a series of vivid sketches written from Sebastopol and when he left the army soon after the Crimean war he devoted himself entirely to literature.

His "War and Peace," a tale of the invasion of Russia by Napoleon in 1812, is regarded in Russia as being his masterpiece, though his "Anna Karenina," which appeared in 1876, and "The Cossacks" found greater favor abroad, where his "Kreutzer Sonata," translations of which were published in 1890, also attracted wide attention.

Tolstoi wrote much on education and published a number of short stories and reminiscences of childhood and youth, but of recent years he had devoted himself to religious teaching. He made "Return Not Evil" the keytone of the Christian faith, and insisted that the literal interpretation of the Sermon on the Mount was the only rule of the Christian life. The religious views of Tolstoi were set forth in his "Christ's Christianity," and "My Religion."

In 1901 Tolstoi was excommunicated by the Holy Synod.

In 1895 he wrote a powerful vindication of the Dukhobor Sect, which during that year had suffered great persecution for its religious professions. Tolstoi was several times threatened with expulsion from Russia and was several times, according to report, upon the point of being exiled; but he seemed on the whole to have been treated with unusual leniency in view of his strongly pronounced views, especially as set forth in a manifesto entitled "The People's Rights," his criticisms of imperial acts and his open letters to the emperor. He was, however, expelled from Moscow in July, 1901, and had since resided at Yasnaya Poliana.

In July, 1904, Toistol wrote a strong article denouncing the Russo-Japanese war, which caused the seizure of the Novosti of St. Petersburg, which published it and a revival of the reports of the government's intention to take severe action against the author.

In January, 1905, Tolstoi published an open letter to the Emperor, regarding the internal condition in Russia, which was printed throughout the world, and some time later he completed his drama, "Behind the Scenes in War," the production of which was prohibited in St. Petersburg.

On the occasion of Tolstoi's 80th birthday extensive celebrations were held, although they were strongly disapproved by the Russian government.

Several of the publishers of Tolstoi's works have been sent to prison. Although Tolstoi came of an aristocratic family, being a descendant of Count Peter Tolstoi, the friend and comrade of Peter the Great, and received his education at Kazin University, entering the army as a lieutenant of artillery and commanding a battery at Sebastopol, he was at heart a peasant in the best sense of the word, devoted to the improvement of the condition of the Russian masses and eager to lead them in the right path.

He lived the life of a peasant on his estate at Yasnaya Poliana, in a peasant's hut, partaking only of the simple peasants' foot and wearing the peasant's costume—rough blouse, broad leather belt, fur cap, long beard, wide trousers tucked into high, cowhide boots.

But although Tolstoi chose the existence of a peasant, his family occupied the substantial family mansion on the Yasnaya Poliana estate, not far from Tolstoi's peasant hut. Although he led a countryman's life, Tolstoi was a great reader and among his recreations were chess, cycling, lawn tennis and swimming.

TWO DIE IN THRILLING WRECK

Boiler of Engine Exploded and Wrecked Passing Train—Occurred on Pennsylvania Road Near Altoona.

Altoona, Pa., Nov. 19.—A thrilling and disastrous wreck on the Pennsylvania Railroad resulting in the death of a locomotive engineer and two firemen and the injury of three other trainmen occurred this afternoon at 30th street, near the western limits of this city.

A fast freight train westbound was just starting up the mountain, helped in the rear by two locomotives when the boiler of the second of the rear engines exploded. The boiler rose from the engine frame and was hurled through the air just as an express train composed entirely of express cars, also westbound, came along on the next track. The express train was being drawn by two locomotives. The first engine struck the falling boiler and hurled it over an embankment 300 feet from where it had left the engine trucks. The impact derailed both locomotives hauling the express train and threw them against the freight erain, knocking over several freight cars. When the explosion occurred Engineer Rorabaugh, who was in charge of the locomotive that exploded, was thrown into the middle of the wreckage and crushed under the tender of one of the express train engines. His fireman, A. C. Furlong, was burned and scalded and died in the Altoona hospital two hours later. Reed was thrown under express train engine No. 2416, of which he was fireman, and instantly crushed to death. Brakeman Riddell, of the freight train, is probably fatally injured.

ROBBED TRUNK OF MONEY.

Bold Intruder Carried Away $136.—Death of Mr. W. B. Branch.

Special Star Telegram.)

Washington, N. C., Nov. 19.—The home of Mr. R. D. Walls, on Third street, was entered between 7 and 8 o'clock last night by unknown parties and a trunk broken open and robbed of $136; it seems that the family were in the front of the residence and the room entered was in the rear of the house, and was used as a bed room. The thieves entered the room by forcing a windows and were so quiet in their operations that none of the family were aware of their presence in the house and the loss was not discovered until the family retired for the night. The local police are at work on the case, but as yet there are no clues to the guilty parties.

Mr. W. B. Branch, of this city, died last evening about 9 o'clock at his home on East Market street, after lingering illness of several years' duration. Mr. Branch is a son of the late Gen. W. O. B. Branch, a former member of Congress from North Carlina and widely known all over the State. Mr. Branch at the time of his death was 63 years of age. He is survived by a heartbroken widow and two daughters, aso two sisters: Mrs. Robert H. Jones and Mrs. Armstead Jones, of Raleigh. The funeral will be conducted from the Episcopal Church Sunday afternoon and the interment will be in Oakdale cemetery.

BELOVED CITIZEN ENTERS INTO REST

Mr. Barzillai G. Worth, of Wilmington, Passes Away at Advanced Age

A DISTINGUISHED CAROLINIAN

Long and Useful Career Ended.—Sketch of His Life by a Friend.—Funeral Services Monday Afternoon.

In the death of Mr. Barzillai Gardner Worth, which occurred last afternoon at his home, No. 206 North Second street, in the 89th year of his age, Wilmington and North Carolina lose one of their most useful and most beloved citizens—a man whose life has been an inspiration to and a benediction upon those about him, one whose influence will be felt in the home, in the church, in the city, in the county and in the State for years to come.

Mr. Worth, after a confinement to his home with the general infirmities of age during the past three weeks, entered into rest at five fifteen o'clock with all members of the devoted family at his bedside. For more than ten days it was known that his last illness was but the beginning of the end, but loved ones and friends all over the city were totally unprepared for the shock that came with the realization that Mr. Worth had gone out from among them. Until his last illness, he had been remarkably active for one of his years and his genial, kindly disposition was known and read of all men. He passed away as he had lived, in that quiet, peaceful manner that was forever one of his characteristics.

Members of the family had been with their venerable father for several days and yesterday at the saddened home on Second street they received the condolences and the sympathy of a host of warm friends in Wilmington, where all are well known. The surviving members of the family are Mr. Archibald Carter Worth, of New Jersey; Mrs. George R. French, of this city; Mr. William E. Worth, of Wilmington; Mrs. Mary J. Woodward, also of Wilmington, and Mrs. Jacob Weller, of Cincinnati.

The funeral will be conducted from the First Presbyterian Church with which Mr. Worth had been connected since 1854 and a ruling elder of which he had been since 1858, at 3 o'clock tomorrow afternoon and the remains will be laid to rest in Oakdale cemetery.

The Star feels that it can give no more interesting or more comprehensive view of the life and character of Mr. Worth than to quote the article by his life-long friend, Mr. C. H. Robinson, in the Biographical History of North Carolina, Vol. III, by Capt. S. A. Ashe, nor can it pay him a higher tribute than that by Mr. James Sprunt, which is printed elsewhere in today's paper.

The review of the life of Mr. Worth by Mr. Robinson is as follows:

"The subject of this sketch was born June 26th, 1822, at Center, in Guilford county, twelve miles from Greensboro, N. C. His ancestors were all of English extraction, and they were Friends, being followers of Fox. William Worth, the first of the name to come to America, fled from England in 1662 to escape religious persecution, and landing in Massachusetts, he settled on the island of Nantucket, where in 1665 he married Sarah Macy, whose father, Thomas Macy, had come to Massachusetts in 1640. William Worth was the first justice of the peace of Nantucket Island, being commissioned by Colonial Governor Andrea, in 1675 he was clerk of the court, and three years later he was recorder and assistant justice of the colony, and in 1860 he served as clerk of the court of admiralty. He attained a great age, and died in 1723. Barzallai Worth's grandfather, Capt. Daniel Worth, at first followed the sea and was captain of a Nantucket whaling ship, and made five long voyages from his island home. When 30 years of age, however, in 1769, he emigrated to North Carolina and purchased land near the Friends' settlement, in the vicinity of Guilford Court House and there reared his family, dying in 1830. One of his sons, Dr. David Worth, married Miss Eunice Gardner and purchased a plantation at Centre, a neighborhood which took its name from the Friends' meeting place nearby, which was known as Centre Meeting House. He was born in 1776 and died in 1844. He had a family of twelve children, of whom Governor Jonathan Worth was the third and oldest to reach maturity, while Barzillai, the subject of this sketch, was the youngest. The other children, Ruth, who married Sidney Porter, of Connecticut, and lived in Greensboro, where a number of her descendants reside; Miriam, who married Barnabas Coffin and lived in Indiana; John Milton Worth, Evelyna Worth, who married Nathan Dennis, of Richmond, Ind.; Louisa Worth, who married William Clark, of Randolph county, and moved to Indiana; Thomas Clarkson Worth, who married Carolina Arthur, of Nantucket; and Joseph Addison Worth.

"Dr. David Worth having lost the first two of his children in infancy, because the nearest physician was thirty miles away and realizing that some medical knowledge would be of service to him in bringing up a family, purchased a few medical books and read them with so much success that in time he became himself qualified to practice and to this end went (in his sulky) in 1815 to Philadelphia and spent the Summer. On his return, he practiced with great success the remainder of his life and stood high with all physicians having just pretentions to distinction.

"Dr. Worth was interested in all good and public enterprises and despite his profession which made his an arduous life, he was chosen to serve his country in the Legislature of 1820, 1822 and 1823. Barzillai Gardner was reared with a family of nine brothers and sisters on his father's plantation, receiving his early education in the neighborhood schools promoted by his father, Dr. Worth. At the age of 18, he was sent for two years to the New Garden School, since known as Guilford College. On his return from this institution in 1842, he took charge of Dr. John Milton Worth's business, who at that time was serving a term at Raleigh as Senator from Moore and Montgomery counties. On his brother's return from his term of service he brought a daguerreotype of himself and Mr. Worth was so pleased with it that he at once decided it was a profession which suited him could he but find means wherewith to secure the necessary training. The doctor agreed to advance his brother the money and he went immediately to Raleigh to learn the art from an operator by the name of Smily. It proved to be no easy art and it was not until two years of patient application and perseverance that he was able to master it sufficiently to make it in any sense remunerative.

"He went on to Philadelphia to secure better instruction and finally succeeded so far as to reimburse his brother and have, after all expenses were met, his first thousand dollars. He now felt himself equipped to marry and begin life in earnest. On June 26th, 1845, he was united to Miss Mary E. Carter, of Davie county, N. C., one of a family of this name in Virginia of great prominence. She was also a granddaughter of Judge Archibald De Bow Murphey, a distinguished jurist of this State. Two years after his marriage, he began merchandizing in the little village of New Salem, in Randolph county. Here two children were born to him. After three years spent in this place he moved to Asheboro and became a partner in a general merchandising business with his brother, Jonathan Worth.

"Dr. T. C. Worth, a brother four years his senior, having removed to Wilmington to take the agency of the Cape Fear Steamboat Co., running between Wilmington and Fayetteville, believing this to be a very superior opening, advised him to come there. He accepted the proposition and removed to the city in the Fall of 1853. The firm of T. C. & B. G. Worth was then formed and continued until the year 1862, when Dr. Worth fell a victim of yellow fever during the great epidemic of that Fall. Both brothers had made wills providing that the survivors (for the better settlement of all business) should continue for a year. During their partnership (which was a shipping and commission business) they were part owners and agents for two schooners named "The Myrover' and 'The Lilly,' sailing between Wilmington and New York; also, two sailing to Philadelphia, called 'The William L. Springs,' and 'The David Foust.' They were part owners and agents for the steamers 'Hurt' and 'Flora McDonald,' fine iron boats, which did a very successful business on the Cape Fear river, between Fayetteville and Wilmington, up to the close of the Civil War. Dr. Worth, during the period of his partnership, endorsed drafts on a cotton spinner in Baltimore for a friend to the extent of $30,000. The firm on which they were drawn failed, and he became responsible for that amount. To try and save himself as best he could he attended the sale of the two cotton mills and bought them in at $30,000. The Commercial Bank of Wilmington, furnished the money. During the year succeeding his death and acting upon the terms of wills which both had made, the firm now making money rapidly (such as it was in 1863) Mr. B. G. Worth paid off the entire indebtedness to the bank and secured the whole interest in the Baltimore property for the heirs of his brother, and at the close of the war went on to Baltimore and succeeded in selling the property for $45,000. Thus what had seemed a great calamity proved a blessing in the end. The firm, being large shippers of peanuts, had great quantities stored in Wilmington. After the first year of the Civil War there arose a demand for oil, which would be suitable for running the cotton mills of the South. Mr. Worth conceived the idea of using their large stock of peanuts in the manufacture of oil and to this end secured a press and began the experiment in a small way. It proved a success and was better than anything on the market. He began the sale of it at $3 per gallon and at the close of the war it readily brought $30 per gallon and was used extensively, being shipped to every part of the South during the entire Civil War. The large profits accruing from this oil business enabled Mr. Worth to take up the notes held against the T. C. Worth estate and thus secured the valuable Baltimore property.

"In 1866, Mr. Worth decided to make a change in his business and he went to New York in the Fall of that year and formed a co-partnership with Mr. C. D. Dibble, of Grandy, Conn., investing all his means in a general commission business, which was prosperous for a time.

"In 1870, upon the death of Mr. N. G. Daniel, of the firm of D. G. Worth and N. G. Daniel, and at the instance of D. G. Worth, he returned to Wilmington (leaving his name in the firm of Dibble, Worth & Co.,) and formed the partnership of Worth & Worth, composed of D. G. Worth and B. G. Worth. In the early part of 1872, the firm of Dibble, Worth & Co., was forced to suspend business. Being liable for the debts of the concern and the failure proving a bad one, he went immediately to New York and spent a year, assuming the responsibility of winding up this business. The indebtedness was so great that a compromise was agreed upon and after exhausting the resources of the firm and all his personal means, he was still under an indebtedness of $37,000, of so sacred a character that he felt it must be paid. The business of Worth & Worth prospered and this debt was paid off in about ten years, leaving him free to start life over.

"While this failure was a most distressing event, the many kindnesses shown him personally were among the most cherished memories of his life. On Nov. 23rd, 1897, Mr. D. G. Worth died and again the firm name was changed, a corporation being formed under the style of the Worth Company, composed of B. G. Worth and the heirs of D. G. Worth. B. G. Worth was named president, C. W. Worth manager. Thus he has been in business in this city for more than 52 years with the exception of four years spent in New York. This sketch of the business life of Mr. Worth indicates that there has been but little time left for official service as a citizen, and yet it would not be true to infer that his duty in this particular has been neglected. He served the county of New Hanover for several years as one of the commissioners and he has been largely interested in the public schools, serving as a committeeman a number of years, and as a citizen of probity and influence, he has been a large factor in whatever cause he considered for the welfare of the city and State, giving material aid to public enterprises for developing business and prosperity. And in public matters his intelligent, sound judgment made him influential in directing public sentiment for the good of the community. His voice and influence were for the right regardless of popularity, a characteristic of the Worth family so well known and esteemed in the State and derived from a strong ancestry, driven from their England home to find freedom to worship God according to the dictates of their conscience.

"Mr. Worth has been a wise counsellor and friend to the young men of the city, his example of rugged honesty, teaching the beauty of a character, strong in honor and righteousness, and his kind words and cheerful willingness to help them when such help meant everything, has made him loved and esteemed by many recipients of his kindness. Perhaps, his fondness for the soil has been a great factor for good that should be considered. He made it his business to have a good garden and it has been his delight to work in it in the early mornings, and he has been proud to exhibit some fine fruit and vegetables he cultivated in his garden, and his experiments resulted in the successful cultivation of the Winter lettuce and probably led to the general cultivation of this favorite Spring edible, which has become a large source of revenue in this region from carload shipments to Northern markets, and no doubt but this employment in his garden has been important in keeping him vigorous and strong in his old age. But the crown upon the head of this vulnerable merchant and citizen will be 'the crown of righteousness which the Lord, the righteous judge, shall give him at that day.'

"And the crowning glory of this useful life is his life in the church. Mr. Worth united with the First Presbyterian Church very soon after his removal to Wilmington in 1853. In December 1858 he was ordained a ruling elder and continued in this office until his removal to New York in 1866. On his return from New York in 1870 he was re-elected to the office and is now the senior elder of the session. He was superintendent of the Sunday School for many years and after he retired from this position, taught a class of young men until infirmity compelled him reluctantly to retire from active service in the school. His sound judgment, even tempered disposition, his open, kindly manner and above all, his unassuming, modest deportment, has made him the object of reverence and love to his pastor, his brother elders and the members of his own church and congregation and to all the churches of the vicinity. He has always, taking into consideration his ability, been the most liberal contributor to the church and its various causes and necessities and he stated that the Lord has given it all back and more. Such has been the life of this honored citizen, man and Christian. Nature's Nobleman, a Christian gentleman—who can estimate the value of such a life to the community, to the church and even to the State? How shall we call it? Has it been successful? Let the words of the Master answer these questions.

"But it shall not be so among you, but whosoever will be great among you, let him be your minister, and whosoever will be chief among you, let him be your servant.'

"Mr. B. G. Worth had seven children. Jonathan died in infancy. Archibald Carter married Lizzie Anderson and resides in New Jersey. Cornelia Murphy married George R. French; William Elliott married Miss Nelly Shay, of New York; Mary Jane Worth married William J. Woodward. Eunice married Jacob Weller, of Cincinnati; Joseph B. Worth married Miss Brink and resided at Petersburg, Va.; Julia Ada Worth married Graham Herring, of Clinton."

TWO PERFORMANCES.

Amateur Production Was Great Success and Much Enjoyed.

Fairly large audiences were at the Academy of Music yesterday afternoon and last night to witness the closing performances of "The Two Vagabonds" and "Spielgartenfest," which were put on for the first time Friday afternoon and evening by local talent under the direction of Mr. Harry Foote. The productions were received with the same degree of interest and entnusiasm as marked the opening performances. The audiences would probably have been larger had the weather been more favorable. The performances were given under the auspices of the Hospital Circle of King's Daughters for the benefit of the District Nurse fund and it is understood that it was a great financial as well as artistic success.

12 MONTHS ON ROADS.

Sentence Given Walter Shaw, Colored, For Entering House.

Walter Shaw, colored, arrested some days ago on a warant charging him with entering the residence of Mr. Geo. Benson on the morning of July 9th, was given hearing in the Recorder's court yesterday morning. He denied the charge and pleaded the mistaken identity, but the evidence was such as to convince the Recorder of his guilt. Shaw was sent to the roads for 12 months. Joseph Coleman, a white man, who created considerable disturbance at the Union station Friday afternoon, was called to answer the charge of drunkenness and disorderly conduct. He was fined $20 with 30 days on the county roads as an alternative. He has not paid the amount of the fine and costs yesterday afternoon and may have to serve the road sentence.

GIFT TO PUBLIC LIBRARY.

The Encyclopedia of Freemasonry Presented by Mr. H. H. Ford.

The Wilmington Public Library has recently received a set of The Encyclopedia of Freemasonry by the late Dr. Albert Gallatin Mackey, with addendum by the late Chas. T. McClenachan, both 33 degree Masons, this being the latest edition of that work. While it is of interest to any reader, the work is of especial interest to members of the fraternity, it being explicit and authentic in its accounts of history and biographical sketches. The encyclopedia, presented by Mr. Herbert H. Ford, a 32 degree Mason of this city, and a most public spirited citizen, is very much appreciated by the library, especially as it is the first work of this kind placed on its tables.

LUMBERTON NEWS GLEANINGS

Court Adjourns—Sad Death of Young McKay—Recollections of John Lowlow—Theatre Attractions—Other Notes.

(Special Star Correspondence.)

Lumberton, N. C., Nov. 19.—The November term of Robeson Superior Court closed today. During the term much work has been done, and the jail is left with only three or four prisoners, the prisoners being defendants in cases which were continued, with the exception of a woman, who was sentenced to a jail term for blockading. In the case of the woman the County Commissioners are given the authority to hire her out. Three or four go to the penitentiary, several to the county chain gang, and a number of defendants in trivial cases have been discharged upon payment of fines and costs. The last court for the year will convene on Monday, December 5th, which will be for civil cases only.

The ending of the life of Mr. Archie McKay, which occurred here Thursday evening, when he took his own life by shooting himself through the heart, is indeed sad in the extreme. Mr. McKay was one of the cleverest and most genteel young men we have known. Mr. Marvin Beverly, the Seaboard agent, in speaking of Mr. McKay's death, said they had worked together at Laurinburg and this place and he considered him one of the brightest and best young men he ever worked with, and that nothing had ever happened to give him such a shock as the rash act of the young man. Mr. Beverly said Mr. McKay had fought hard to overcome the awful habit which had grown on him, but seemed powerless to help himself, and Thursday morning told Mr. Beverly it was useless for him to try further and that he would give up his position rather than impose longer on a friend who had done all in his power to help him.

We read a few days ago of the death of John Lowlow, which occurred in Cincinnati last month. It is doubtful if any circus clown was better known all over the country than Mr. Lowlow. He was the clown in the first circus we ever visited. That was in 1869, when John Robinson was driving through the country with a one-ring show. When the show came to Lumberton the tent was pitched on the lot now occupied by the dwellings of Messrs. Geo. G. French, W. J. Prevatt, F. J. Floyd and others. Mr. Lowlow was a college mate at Chapel Hill of Dr. R. F. Lewis and Capt. W. S. Norment, two of Lumberton's most honored citizens, both of whom passed away several years ago. The last time we saw the famous old clown he was with Main's circus in Wilmington 12 or 15 years ago. It is said that he was at one time very wealthy, but lost nearly all and died a poor man at the age of about 75.

The street force is busily engaged trying to keep the streets decent and in order. Hundreds of tons of leaves and other trash are raked and hauled off every year to be dumped out in the woods or any place to get trash out of the way, when it should be used on the near-by farms. It does seem that some of the thrifty farmers in this section would use the good land-improving stuff that is being thrown away instead of allowing it to go to waste, and many people right in town are buying straw for their lots and stables when they could get more than they could use just for hauling it off the streets.

Scott Leslie's vaudeville show, which played the opera house first three night of this week, made a decided hit and did big business. The show was all to the good, large audiences witnessed it every night, and will always be delighted to see Mr. Leslie and his genteel company of players. Mr. Leslie said he did not often play outside of cities, but must say that the three days spent in Lumberton were the most pleasant he ever spent in a town of its size.

The management of the motion picture show regrets exceedingly to have to announce the discontinuance of the show during the Winter months. The closing of the show is made necessary from the fact that since cold weather has come enough people do not attend it to pay expenses, and it can't be operated without the cash. Large crowds attended during the warm weather but with the approach of cold weather they find something else more interesting.

Seats will go on sale Monday morning for the forthcoming engagement at the Lumberton Opera House, of the merry, tuneful musical play, "A Japanese Honeymoon," which will be presented by the "Runaways," the big musical comedy company, which numbers over 20 people, including a prize beauty chorus of over a dozen dancing and singing girls. People here who have seen the show in other towns pronounce it great. The show appears here Thanksgiving night and the indications are that the performance will be witnessed by an immense crowd.

Yesterday morning a large opossum was discovered going up a large red oak near the residence of Mr. C. B. Skipper. An effort was made by some boys to catch him, but he was too smart for them and succeeded in hiding himself in the branches of the tree so that he could not be shot. Where he came from is left for someone to guess.

It is a little surprising that gentlemen who use tobacco will so far forget themselves as to distribute the juice of the weed all over the floor of a building which is visited by ladies in large numbers. During the attractions which have been presented at the opera house this week several people evidently forgot themselves in that respect.

Just think of it, a lady residing in Charlotte sending all the way to Lumberton for a Winter hat. She did so for the reason that she could get just what she wanted in Lumberton and could not get it at home. It's getting to be a well known fact that if you can't get what you want here in many lines it is no use to try elsewhere.

Mr. Bert Edmund, of this place, and Miss Cora Gasque, of Marion, S. C., were united in marriage Thursday at 1:30 P. M., at the home of the bride's parents. The wedding was very quiet, only a few friends being invited. Mr. Claude Roberts accompanied Mr. Edmund on his happy mission. The party arrived in Lumberton Thursday evening at 5:30 and went to the home of the groom's mother, Mrs. Martha Edmund, where he and his bride will make their home. Mr. Edmund is a popular salesman for Messrs. Townsend Bros., and Mrs. Edmund was one of the most popular young ladies of her section. A large circle of friends extend congratulations and wish ofr them long and happy lives.

Many friends will regret to learn that Mr. Robert Demorest, who recently spent a week here with the Demorest Comedy Co., has been very sick for several days in Tarboro. He is improving, however, and hopes to be able to take part in the show which is booked for all of next week in Laurinburg.

Several young men from here expect to spend Thanksgiving in Richmond while others will go to Norfolk. Quite a number of Lumberton people will ago attend a marriage at Rowland on that day.

Mr. A. A. Nathan, of Wilmington, was a welcome Lumberton visitor yesterday.

A report has reached here that there is connected with a carnival company which has been filling an engagement at Rowland during the week, the wife and two children of a former Lumberton pastor; also the wife of a former Wilmington saloon keeper. It is said the ladies are sisters-in-law and while we do not vouch for the truthfulness of the report, a former pastor here did tell us that he had a brother-in-law in Wilmington who operated a saloon and many people here have reason to believe his statement. An actress who recently played Lumberton, made the statement that it had only been a short time since she had been a member of a company in which the Wilmington man's wife was also engaged.

Mr. Jack Morris, who has for some time been Seaboard cashier at this place, has been made chief clerk to Mr. Beverly, agent, to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Mr. McKay. We have not learned who will succeed Mr. Morris as cashier.

The much talked of decline in the prices of meats has not hit this section very hard yet, there being only very slight drop in steak, while pork hams are too high to be looked at—18 cents.

Miss Pattie Shines, who recently came here from Duplin to accept a position as stenographer with the V. & C. S., has resigned and gone to South Carolina, where she accepted a similar position. She is succeeded here by Miss Hattie Culbreth, of Falcon, N. C.

"Durma," the mysterious, will be the attraction at the opera house November 26th. This will be the second attraction of the Lyceum caurse for which tickets were recently sold here.

The residence of Mrs. Ora Purvis, about eight miles from here, was destroyed by fire one night this week, the fire being of unknown origin. The loss is estimated at about $2,500, partially covered by insurance. Mrs. Purvis was visiting in Lumberton when she learned of the destruction of her home.

Mr. Lacy McKenzie, who has been confined at home for some time with an attack of typhoid fever, is slowly improving, but still very weak.

The big lot sale which was pulled off at Dublin, Bladen county, Wednesday, was well attended by Lumberton peope. lots amounting in value to about $6,000 were sold.

Miss Annie Ruth Caldwell, a student of Meredith College in Raleigh, came home last night to spend Saturday and Ssnday with he rparents, Mr. and Mrs. R. D. Caldwell.

Col. S. A. Edmund spent the past three days in Marion, S. C., on business.

TRINITY COLLEGE.

Live News of Interest From the Campus and Elsewhere.

(Special Star Correspondence.)

Trinity College, Durham, N. C., Nov. 19.—The debate between Trinity and the University of the South will be held at Sewanee, Tenn., on December 17th. The representatives from Trinity will be Clyde O. Fisher, of Cary, and E. J. Londow, of Asheville. The first debate of the series was held at Trinity in the Spring of 1909. The Debate Council has also arranged for a debate with Swarthmore College of Pennsylvania, to be held in Durham in the early Spring, probably some time in February. It is the policy of the Council to arrange two intercollegiate debates each year, one of which is held in Durham and one at the opposite institution. In addition to these the literary societies arrange intersociety debates, as well also as debates between the various classes.

President Few is at Winston where he went to attend the western North Carolina conference now in session at that place.

The Science Club held a most interesting meeting last Monday evening. The principal address of the evening was by Prof. R. N. Wilson of the Department of Chemistry, on "The Chemistry of the Soil as Related to Crop Production." Before coming to Trinity Prof. Wilson was connected with the Florida Agricultural and Experiment Station, and in his lecture he gave the results of experiments carried on by this station.

Rev. J. C. C. Newton, a native of South Carolina, but for a number of years a missionary to Japan, addressed the meeting of the Young Men's Christian Association last Wednesday evening. He spoke interestingly of Japan, and brought out some interesting points in regard to the great sunrise kingdom of the Orient. He also conducted chapel exercises on Thursday morning.

The November Archive has just come from the press, and is called the inaugural number. Besides the regular literary work it contains the inaugural address of President Few, and a sketch of Dr. Harry Pratt Judson, president of the University of Chicago, who delivered the address of congratulation in behalf of the visiting delegates.

The Publication Committee is arranging to publish a book containing all the addresses made at the inauguration exercises. It will contain all the announcements and circular letters and invitations sent out by the committee on arrangements, and promises to be a most interesting volume when completed.

The declamation contest to be held here next week under the auspices of the "9010" Society, promises to be a most interesting event. The number of secondary schools that have notified the committee that they would send representatives is very large, and the society feels that it has not labored in vain. A preliminary contest will be held and a number of representatives will be chosen to speak. The contest will be held in the Craven Memorial Hall, November 25th.

A. & M. GAME.

Great Contest Expected in Norfolk on Thanksgiving—The Teams.

(Special Star Correspondence.)

West Raleigh, N. C., Nov. 19.—Not in years has so much interest been taken in a football game as is being manifested in the V. P. I.—A. & M. game in Norfolk on Thanksgiving.

Reports from the railroad people in Raleigh say that between 85 and 90 per cent. of those leaving Raleigh to attend a Thanksgiving football game are going to Norfolk this year to see two of the most representative teams in this section contest for the gridiron honors of the South.

When two such well coached aggressive teams, both with magnificent team work and spirit, come together, the best, highest class game of football to be played in the South this year will be pulled off.

Special trains for this game will be run by both the Norfolk & Southern and Seaboard Air Line from Raleigh and also from Goldsboro and Newbern by the Norfolk & Southern.

The last practice scrimmage of the season will be held Monday. After Monday only signal practice, etc., will be given the men. At present all of the men are in the very best of physical condition.

This game will afford the public the last chance to see A. & M.'s famous center, John Bray, in action, as this is his last year on the Red and White team. He has already been selected by one of the most prominent sporting writers in the country as all-Southern center for 1910.

A. & M. expects to send between 300 and 400 enthusiastic students to Norfolk along with the band to back up the team with their songs and yells.

A comparison of the records of the two teams for this season will be interesting at this time. A. & M. tied Georgetown in the first game of the season 0 to 0. The next game A. & M. tied Villa Nova 6 to 6. Then A. & M. defeated Eastern College 22 to 0, and then Richmond College 50 to 0. A. & M. had no chance to try conclusions with Washington & Lee as the game was cancelled by the latter institution on account of injuries to their players. V. P. I. defeated Western Maryland 13 to 0; Davidson 16 to 6. The Navy defeated V. P. I. 3 to 0. V. P. I. defeated Washington & Lee 23 to 0, and Carolina 20 to 0. Then Geo. Washington 15 to 6.

From comparative scores A. & M's. showing is equally as good as V. P. I's.

Special $7.00 rate to Richmond and return, for the Thanksgiving football game. Special Pullman service. Phone 160 for reservations. **

All business men will be at Chamber of Commerce rooms Monday, 12 M. **

Belle of Wilmington Flour

is one of the first factors to be considered, as it enters more or less into most of the dishes that make the feast, and therefore is an essential that cannot be overlooked. Bread, cakes, pies and pastry make the greatest claim upon its usefulness, and it gives to these articles their principal claim as table delicacies. If your grocer does not handle BELLE of WILMINGTON FLOUR have him order a trial shipment from

The orator who "rises to the height of the occasion" doubtless feels as elated as if he were an aviator.

If Mary had a little lamb with fleece as white as snow, she'd sell it quick before the price goes down from high to low.

Says the New York Tribune (Republican): "After all, the most audible silence on the election results in New York is that of Mr. Justice Hughes." The lucky ex-Governor doubtless is too busy congratulating himself that President Taft gave him asylum in the Supreme Court instead of leaving him where he would have to take chances on the cyclone cellar.

Attorney General Wickersham now holds that the guilt of a corporation is personal to the extent that the person who formulated the wrong for the corporations to commit is the real culprit. Col. William J. Bryan is despised for making that discovery, while Republicans who have latterly filched Bryanism get credit for wisdom and patriotism. It takes Republican administrations 16 years to come to the conclusion that there is personal responsibility for the misdeeds of corporations.

Ex-President Theodore Roosevelt visited Washington on Friday to deliver an address that night before the National Geographical Society upon the subject of his African hunt. President Taft was absent on the Panama Canal, so that saved Col. Roosevelt the embarrassment of having to pay his respects to the President of the United States. Probably if President Taft had been in, the Colonel might have furnished us something more to talk about by not sending in his card. Who knows?

A Massachusetts farmer, having raised about 103 bushels of corn on an acre of ground claimed the world's record for corn production as to acreage. He hadn't heard of the record of Jerry Moore, the 17-year-old South Carolina boy who produced 258 bushels per acre, nor of the achievement of Miss Hannah Plowden, the 15-year-old Clarendon county girl, who raised 120 bushels per acre herself. There are a whole lot of things that Massachusetts folks don't know about the South and doubtless that accounts for the reason they think they are the whole cheese in general. Leastwise, there are a whole lot of folks who know very little about the South and they go right on not knowing anything about it.

One T. Roosevelt has broken the silence. For the first time since the election the Colonel visited Washington on Friday—also for the first time since his official departure from the White House in March, 1909. He was a guest of the National Press Club, and, when the newspaper boys probably thought now is the time for him to say something about the result of the election, all he would say was "every dog has his day but the nights belong to the cats." Of course, everybody laughed at the Colonel's joke, but Zack McGhee, Washington correspondent of the Columbia State, wired his paper that he hadn't "been able to find anyone who has the least idea what the point of his little joke was." What difference does that make? The Colonel probably didn't mean anything at all, as he is just in the habit of shooting whatever is in his gun, hit or miss. The Colonel speaks never in an explanatory but riddlesome manner. He leaves a great deal to interpretation and always neglecs to interpret his words himself.

LATE MR. B. G. WORTH.

On the eve of the Holy Sabbath, the gentle spirit of the venerable Mr. Barzillai G. Worth, one of Wilmington's most greatly beloved and highly honored citizens, took its flight from these earthly scenes. That this gentle, pure-minded and lovable gentleman should lie within the quiet embrace of death on this Church day is but suggestive of the serene and beautiful life which closed yesterday evening, rounding out an earthly sojourn marked by lofty purpose, great usefulness and all the gentle graces of the Christian man.

Mr. Worth was one of the gentlest, kindest and truest of men and during his well spent years was ever illustrated the highest ideals of manly character, personal integrity and purity of life. It were vain to speak of his virtues, for they were innumerable, while the life he lived was one sublimely exemplary for its unaffected sincerity, kindly generosity, liberal charities and unostentatious piety.

TRUSTS DO THE MISTRUSTING.

"The people mistrust the Democratic party," says a New York Republican paper. The election returns for the 8th of November don't seem to have been interpreted correctly by the Republican editor. Quite likely he is no judge of what a landslide means. For his benefit, it might be stated that the overwhelming vote for the Democratic party indicates that the people trust it and mistrust the Republican party which they have tried to their extreme dissatisfaction.

As a matter of fact, the people do not mistrust the Democratic party. It is the trusts which distrust it, but they succeeded for some years in creating the impression upon some intelligent people that the Democratic party was an enemy to vested interests because it did not favor special privileges and permit its beneficiaries to exploit the people. The whole truth in a nut shell is that the Democratic party has always stood for "equal rights for all and special privileges for none." This means that vested interests and the people have equal rights and privileges and not that favorite interests shall be favored to the extent that the masses are at their mercy.

Vested rights will find out that Democracy will give them equal rights with the people instead of special privileges to the detriment of the people. It will be a violation of Democratic principles not to guarantee equal opportunity and preservation of every interest, popular and corporate, in this country. The Democratic party respects the rights and privileges of every class, while the Republican party sets itself up as the defender and protector of the privileged classes, letting the masses shift for themselves.

COUNTY CORN SHOWS.

South Carolina is giving us something new in the way of "county corn shows," and they are not only intensely interesting at home, but are giving the State world-wide publicity. That is all on account of the fact that the boys of the South Carolina "Boys' Corn Clubs" have beaten the world on the number of bushels of corn raised per acre. At Manning, S. C., Thursday the biggest and most successful corn show held so far this Fall in any county, occupied the attention of a large crowd. The exhibit was so marvellous and the exercises were so interesting it was late in the evening before the affair came to a close.

About 80 of the 140 corn club boys in Clarendon county made exhibits and all of them evinced deep interest in the progress of the great work in which they are engaged. The greatest yield of corn on one acre in Clarendon was 163 bushels, while there were five boys whose yields were more than 100 bushels per acre. There were 96 exhibits, including one by Miss Hannah Plowden, a 15-year-old girl, who won the third prize in the contest for having raised 120 bushels on one acre. Furman Broadway, a boy, got first prize for 163 bushels. The second greatest yield was by Jake Williams, whose crop amounted to 139 bushels. The first prize was $25, the second $10 and the third $5. The $5 went to the girl corn raiser but everybody will be satisfied that she should have gotten one dollar a bushel for her 120 bushels. The 140 members of the Boys' Corn Club averaged a production of 62 bushels per acre, or 8,680 bushels on their 140 acres.

These corn contests in North and South Carolina demonstrate that cotton, tobacco and peanuts are not the only big money crops that can be raised in this unrivalled part of the country. Let us have some Boys' Hay Clubs for next year.

"We can no longer buy beefsteak for a song," remarks a contemporary. Well, it depends altogether upon who sings the song. Mme. Cavaleri could come very nearly buying a whole packing house for what she gets for her songs.

SUGAR CANE POSSIBILITIES.

Col. Wade H. Harris, of the Charlotte Evening Chronicle, gets out every now and then and airs himself along the railroads running in and out of Charlotte at about the points of the compass. Charlotte is one place where one can catch almost a dozen trains in different directions during the day and be back in Charlotte at most any time it suits him. No doubt this is a little tempting for Editor Harris, for he just won't tie himself down to the shop all the time. He gets out and skylarks around but he never fails to see something to write about in his interesting way. He must have been down about Monroe a few days ago, for in the Chronicle of Friday he writes:

"We had noticed that along the line of the railroad in Union county, there are more sugar cane, or sorghum patches, than usual, and the idea we got from it was that the people were getting back to the wholesome and unadulterated home-made molasses. But maybe we were mistaken, for another thing is made from the cane. It is called mockum.

"The Monroe Enquirer tells us about it. 'We heard that word for the first time about two weeks ago,' says that paper, 'heard a man say that another was drunk on 'mockum.' We thought at first that it was a new name for just common 'likker,' but it is not. Mockum is a drunk-making stuff made from cane juice, let ferment and work off. They do say that it will make a drunk lasting a week, a meaner drunk than hard cider makes.' A fierce concoction like mockum out of sugar cane and alcohol out of sawdust! What is this country coming to?"

"Mockum" ain't so very "fierce." It gets in its work gradual like and it is said that it does not swipe its victim like chain lightning but takes hold of him by degrees and stays with him till the finish if he can stay with it. Of course, we don't know so very much about mockum from experience, but only from observation. We got acquainted with mockum around the sugar cane mills near Charlotte. Mockum is only a bi-product of sugar cane while syrup of the finest grade is the chief product, some of it made by farmers all around Charlotte being equal if not superior, to the boasted "Georgia cane syrup." We have hung around the cane mill and have seen them grind the cane and strain the juice into the evaporator and then start a hot fire underneath it in the furnace. Soon the juice begins to boil and bubble and throw yellow skum to the surface. The syrup-maker skims off the skum and dumps it from the skimmer into a barrel. The skum then takes care of itself and does the rest. It ferments in the barrel, whatever is thrown to the surface by fermentation is skimmed off and what is left in the barrel is mockum, which only need be dumped into a still to make the purest kind of rum. However, mockum is not used for that purpose, but is attended to immediately by all hands who take turns with a tin cup till the mockum is exhausted or the bunch of mockum drinkers are put out of business.

Of course, most of the farmers in Mecklenburg and other fine counties around Charlotte don't pay much attention to their mockum. Most of them feed the skum to their hogs and it's a great fat producer. Cows also love it and it's a great cream maker. It is only when it is fermented that men will have anything to do with it, but mockum is not so very bad unless some fellow hangs around the barrel long enough to absorb its contents. However, what we are really aiming to get down to here is that syrup making and not mockum making is what the farmers are doing with their sugar cane. We mean the progressive and up-to-date farmer who plants sugar cane or ribbon cane and makes his own "wholesome and unadulterated home-made molasses." The old fashion sorghum or millet is a thing of the past, but it has been demonstrated that all around Charlotte as well as throughout eastern North Carolina especially, ribbon cane grows to perfection and is excedingly profitable. Some farmers around Charlotte, who know how, are making from it syrup as good as Georgia cane syrup ever dared to be. There ought to be a good market for it in Charlotte and doubtless is, for all the farmers who make syrup sell at good prices all they can produce.

Some eastern North Carolina farmers don't know that or they would plant ribbon cane and supply the Wilmington market and meet a big demand for cane syrup all over the country. Georgia cane syrup is considered something extraordinary, and so it is, and thousands of gallons of it are being consumed in Wilmington and all over the country. Just as good syrup can be made right here in this Cape Fear country from the same kind of cane, and it opens up an opportunity for our farmers to add another product to their crop diversification and do so at a good profit.

Some of our eastern North Carolina farmers have tried it on a small scale and make their own molasses, but they have none for the market, while the market is fairly yawning for it. The fact is, some of our farmers do not know what a great demand there is for pure syrup, such as can be made to perfection all around us. We remember to have seen in the Whiteville News-Reporter this Summer a statement that a Columbus county farmer had brought to town with him a lot of sugar cane "as big as a man's wrist" and that the grower declared it grew to perfection on his land—so luxuriantly, in fact, that he could make 500 gallons of syrup to the acre, but "there is no market for it," so far as he knew. Of course, the Columbus farmer was mistaken about the market. The market for it is big and wide and a profitable price awaits the farmer for every gallon of good syrup he can make. We have often pondered over the Columbus farmer's mistaken notion that there was no market for the syrup he could make, and it inevitably brings up the reflection that all of us let many opportunities slip by us because we don't try to know things. We may be ever so intelligent but if we don't keep posted and make a practical application of our intelligence, it counts for nothing.

There are a whole lot of other things besides sugar cane that we know little about this country of unrivalled opportunities. Let us be more alert concerning the numerous possibilities which lie so prodigally around us in eastern North Carolina. This section absolutely will produce in profusion and to perfection more "big money" agricultural and garden products than any portion of America, and it is time for us to make practical use of our knowledge of the fact.

Winsome Wilmington. No that's not a slogan. It is only what she is—and then some more.

In New York City, it is said, there are 87,000 bedrooms without a single window. No doubt that is rather discouraging to the peeping Tom business.

A Congressman is not expected to drag along at Washington. He is expected to get a pull and get their Eli. However, as the "pork barrel" unwritten law has been repealed, a Congressman will be compelled to have a meritorious project on hand if he expects to convey Federal capital to his district.

The Colonel had a great welcome in Washington on Friday but he knows better now than to believe he is "elected" because the crowd turns out and is glad to see him. His recent campaign experience teaches him that a "large and enthusiastic audience" can greet a fellow and then go right to the polls and not vote his way.

The death of Aviator Johnstone, who held the American record for altitude flight in an aeroplane, had hardly won fame till he was dashed to death from a height of 500 feet in the air, at Denver, Colo., November 17th. CURRENT COMMENT.

The "boy farmers" are helping to make South Carolina famous; they they are helping to give the sort of advertising that pays. A letter arrived here yesterday, from a distant city bearing this inscription: Mr. Jerry H. Moore, Champion Boy Farmer of the World, care of the Columbia State, Columbia, South Carolina." It was forwarded. We suspect the story of Jerry Moore and, incidentally, the qualities of South Carolina land and climate, will be set before more than a million people in a score of States.—Columbia State.

Major Hemphill, of the Richmond Times-Dispatch, didn't know that Dr. Alphonso Smith loaned to the University of Virginia, could "pick" the banjo. There are a good many things that the majah has yet to learn about North Carolina talent. There is a cultivated man in Winston who can sling a jug over his left shoulder and take a drink in approved mountain style. When it comes to picking a banjo, Colonel Joe Reese, of The Greensboro Record, is what the musical critics would call a premier artist. And for a fiddler, The Chronicle will match Brother Martin, of The Lenoir News against the South. For poesy and song, Colonel Bob Phillips, of The Greensboro News, could put Virginia to blush. O, The Richmond Times-Dispatch has a good deal to learn.—Charlotte Chronicle.

The reward which follows enterprise is illustrated in the statement sent out in a news letter from Lumberton that on a recent Saturday afternoon 25 Bladen county people came to Lumberton to shop, returning to their homes the same evening. Behind this movement of Bladen county trade to Lumberton is a tale of commendable hustling on the part of the merchants of the Robeson capital. Several months ago they took up with the authorities of the Virginia & Carolina Southern Railroad the question of an extension of that line from St. Paul's, in the northern part of Robeson county, to Elizabethtown, the county seat, of Bladen. Their argument was practical and its result was the construction of the desired route, together with the inauguration of a convenient schedule. The Lumberton merchants saw the possibilities and lost no time in securing the necessary facilities. Their reward is a trade from northern Bladen which in the nature of things should increase. The Fayetteville Index has noted the facts cited with an approving eye and draws a moral for its own community therefrom. Naturally—that is, judged by distance and comparative convenience—Fayetteville should share in the benefits of St. Paul's-Elizabethtown extension and get a portion of the Bladen trade. This, according to The Index, it is not doing thus far. Our Fayetteville contemporary correctly thinks that this matter is one for the Fayetteville Retail Merchants' Association and Chamber of Commerce to consider. Bladen is a prosperous county and there should be enough potential business in its northern section to make it quite worth the while of Fayetteville merchants to attract their share. If this is done, in the end the efforts of Lumberton and Fayetteville combined will result in a very considerable development of this particular field of trade.—Charlotte Observer.

AFFAIRS AT DURHAM.

First Voters' Democratic Club.—Colored Woman's Death.

Durham, N. C., Nov. 19.—The First Voters' Club, which did such valiant service in the recent campaign, is to be a permanent organization. Letters have been sent out to the vice-presidents in the different sections of the county congratulating them upon their faithful work, and asking them to look out for the interests of the Club during the next two years. At the beginning of the next campaign, all the members of this year will be expected to get a new man to take their place, and they will then be honorary members.

Dr. James E. Shepard, president of the National Religious Training School and Chautauqua for the colored race, is in the North in the interest of his school. Judge Pritchard, and members of the advisory board have projected a plan for the raising of funds to build the medical missionary building. There are several other plans on foot for raising money for other purposes. The school has more han one hundred sudens and is going ahead with its regular curriculum. One hundred and fifty more are expected before the Fall term ends.

The remains of Ada Bryant, the negro woman who died as the result of injuries received by being struck by an automobile at the aviation meet at Raleigh last Wednesday evening, were brought to her home here for burial. The funeral took place yesterday afternoon from the home of her mother, whose pathetic meaning and screams yesterday moved her white friends to the deepest compassion. Alice Castlebury, also of this city, and who was injured by the same machine, seems to be in a fair way to recovery.

THE CALL TO BUSINESS MEN

Option Secured on Valuable Property for Commercial Building for Wilmington—Movement in Which All May Help.

Business Men of Wilmington!

Irrespective of your membership in the organization, you are cordially invited to attend a meeting in the rooms of the Chamber of Commerce tomorrow (Monday) at noon for the consideration of an important subject to the commercial life of the city.

J. VanB. METTS,
THOS. H. WRIGHT,
LOUIS E. HALL,
Committee.

A commercial building for Wilmington!

That's the slogan of the committee recently appointed by the Wilmington Chamber of Commerce to survey the field and arrange for location, ways and means, etc.

The committee believes that with the proper support of the business men of Wilmington at large, it can succeed in its undertaking and with this end in view, it has promulgated a call for a mass meeting of the business men of Wilmington to be held tomorrow noon at the Chamber of Commerce for the purpose of canvassing the situation fully.

During the past week an option was secured on the larger part of the old Seaboard Air Line property on the west side of Front street, between Chestnut and Grace, a most eligible location, and the proposition is to erect an eight or ten story building thereon as a home for the commercial bodies of Wilmington. The committee has a very satisfactory plan of action and the meeting tomorrow is for its submission to the business public. They present their claims in the following strong appeal to the public spirit of every merchant and business man in the city:

A city, like an individual, can not stand still—it must move along with the procession of progress or fall behind. Just what place it will take in the ranks is for the individual citizen to determine. Their city can drag along doing a little, trail in the rear ranks and keep its name somewhere in small letters on the map; or it can be alive, active, looking out for and grasping opportunities and be well in the advance guard of the enterprising growing Southern cities.

The Chamber of Commerce of Wilmington, through its progressive officers, is doing what is absolutely essential for a city's growth—Looking ahead to be ready and prepared for the increased needs. To create demand. To show to the world that we are just as thoroughly alive as other cities. With this in view a committee was appointed some time ago to look into the feasiblity of building an office building that will first, be a credit to the city and a self-supporting, dividend paying proposition.

This is in line and just what other cities have done. There is hardly a city of Wilmington's size and importance that has not a building of a height and size that shows the visitor the right spirit—creates confidence in ourself and pride in our community.

With this end in view the committee has worked hard and faithfully, and have a report to make to the entire business interest of Wilmington. Therefore, as is noted in our advertising columns, a meeting is called at the rooms of the Chamger of Commerce (over A. David & Company's store) for Monday, 12 M.

This meeting is particularly for all the business people, and all are urged to attend. The old adage of Davy Crockett "Be sure you are right, then go ahead" is the conservatism this committee wants to exercise.

An expression of opinion is all that will be asked for at this meeting. It is to find if the spirit of progress is alive, to find if the business interests are behind the proposition, and if it will show that it is self-supporting and will pay a fair return to the people who will own it, will they back up the committee who are giving their time, work, energy and some money to present this to you.

When business men, and busy men, do as much work as this committee have done it is right and courteous that they should be heard and serious consideration be given to the proposition they unfold.

Just mentally, picture an eight or ten-story office building, with a handsome front, marble, tile or other material for a lobby, handsome stores, and two elevators taking you to large, well appointed offices.

The location is part of the old Seaboard office property on west side of Front, between Chesnut and Grace streets, and as good as can be secured.

Remember, you have seen a similar building in every other city of any importance and know that it will only take a little of your support and the work is done.

Don't let the size of the building or the size of the figures scare you. Be an optimist. They have built all the other buildings that make Wilmington, and at a time when the outlook was not near so bright as it is to us now.

Come Monday to the meeting and lend your aid.

QUESTION STILL UNSETTLED

Only a Few Representatives of Municipal Bodies at Meeting to Consider the Sewerage Question—Engineer's Statement.

In accordance with a suggestion of Mr. H. C. McQueen at the meeting of the Board of Audit and Finance last Tuesday night, Mayor Walter G. MacRae a few days ago called a meeting of the Board of Aldermen, Board of Audit and Finance and Water and Sewerage Commission for 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon for the purpose of thoroughly considering the sewerage question, with special reference to the proposition to purchase the existing sewerage plant, and as a result there were present at the hour mentioned three members of the Board of Aldermen, two of the Board of Audit and Finance and one of the commission. Owing to the fact that there was not a majority of either board present no action was taken, although the meeting heard a statement from Engineer Hammond, who made a report recently on the existing sewerage plant.

The meeting was called to order shortly after . o'clock, by Mayor MacRae, who read a communication from the Board of Audit and Finance requesting that a conference on the question be held, in accordance with a suggestion of Mr. H. C. McQueen, of that board. There were present besides the Mayor the following: Aldermen Hinton Ellis and Fales, Mr. John J. Fowler, city clerk and treasurer; City Attorney Herbert McClammy, Messrs. M. J. Heyer and Jessie Wilder, members of the Board of Audit and Finance, and Capt. Thos. D. Meares, the clerk; Mr. Chas. W. Worth, member Water and Sewerage Commission, and Mr. R. C. Cantwell, the superintendent; Engineers Hammond and DeKinder, of the Wilmington Sewerage Company; City Engineer Humphreys; Engineer Anderson, consulting engineer of Water and Sewerage Commission, and Iredell Meares, Esq., attorney for some of the bond holders of the sewerage company. Mr. W. B. Cooper, of the Board of Audit and Finance, came in later. After reading the call for the conference the Mayor said that the meeting was open for business.

Chairman Heyer, of the Board of Audit and Finance, said that there were present only two members of his board, only three Aldermen and only one member of the Water and Sewerage Commission, therefore whatever action might be taken would be by the minority of the three boards. Mr. McQueen, who proposed the conference was not present and a telephone message from him, was to the effect that he would be there in a few minutes. In the meantime, Mr. Wilder asked to be excused. Then Mr. Chas. W. Worth, of the Water and Sewerage Commission, stated that as he understood it the conference was for the purpose of taking action as to what should be done regarding the existing sewerage plant and as his board had absolutely nothing to do with this phase of the question he would ask to be excused. His request was granted. Mr. McQueen arrived. Alderman Fales said that he was present for the purpose of getting some information and moved that the meeting either proceed or adjourn. Mr. Heyer said that Engineer Hammond and others of the sewerage company were present and he . lt sure the meeting would like to hear from them.

Mr. DeKinder, an engineer, who is interested in the sewerage company, made a few remarks and then he introduced to the meeting Engineer Hammond, who spoke for more than a half an hour, giving in detail the sewerage company's side of the proposition, bringing out practically the same points as at the former informal conference, previously reported in this paper. Mr. Hammond read extracts from his recent report on the sewerage plant, the recommendations he made and also answered a number of questions asked by Mr. McQueen, City Engineer Humphreys and Mr. Heyer.

Alderman Ellis said that he understood that the Aldermen had already passed upon the matter of whether or not they would purchase the existing plant. They had not only passed upon the matter one time, but twice, and he did not consider that the Aldermen had anything further to do with the matter.

Without arriving at any definite conclusion, or without any suggestion for a future conference, the meeting adjourned shortly before 7 o'clock, leaving the entire matter as it was— in an unsettled condition.

TO CONSIDER NEW HOME.

Special Meeting of the Chamber of Commerce Tomorrow Noon.

The matter of a new home for the Wilmington Chamber of Commerce, which has previously been considered among the members, will be brought up again tomorrow noon, at a special meeting called by the secretary, Mr. J. A. McGeachy.

When previous arrangements were under way the Chamber considered the erection of a building and it is probable that this matter will be again taken up at the meeting tomorrow. It is requested that members be present as it will be one of the most important meetings held in some time.

The letter sent out yesterday to members is as follows:

"Dear Sir:—A special meeting of the Chamber of Commerce will be held Monday, November 21st, at 12 o'clock noon, to hear a report from the committee appointed some time ago to look into the feasibility of securing a home for the Chamber.

"All business interests have been invited to join us in this meeting and as it is a matter of great importance to Wilmington we trust you will make a special effort to be present.

"Yours very truly,
"J. A. McGEACHY, Secretary."

He leaves a mother, two brothers and two sisters to mourn his sad and untimely death and they have the sympathy of a great many friends in their bereavement. He was a grandson of Rev. Julien P. Faison and was held in the highest esteem wherever he was known.

CUTTER BACK IN PORT.

After Week of Target Practice Near Fort Caswell—Details.

The revenue cutter Seminole, Capt. Crisp, returned to port yesterday from Southport and that vicinity after a week of target practice on a new range built on Smith Island near Bald Head lighthouse.

The target practice which was engaged in by every member of the crew, proved very satisfactory, and shots were made from 200 yards, 300 yards sitting, 300 prone rapid firing and 15, 25 and 50 yards with revolvers. The Seminole will remain in port this week unless she receives an urgent call and will convey the delegates to the drainage convention on a river trip next Thursday.

DONALDSON VS WILMINGTON

Two Fine Football Teams Met at League Park Yesterday Afternoon—Score Was Nothing to Nothing—Game.

For four quarters, of ten minutes each, the Donaldson Military School boys from Fayetteville battled with the Wilmington High School eleven at League Park yesterday afternoon for football honors. Neither side succeeded in crossing the goal line. The game was closely contested from the first blow of the whistle and the ball was see-sawed from one end of the field to the other.

During the first quarter neither side had a decided advantage, although the visitors at one stage advanced the ball dangerously near the High School's goal. Several end runs and a punt carried the ball beyond the danger zone. In the second quarter Donaldson made very little gain through the locals' line, although the High School line was lighter. The second quarter ended with the ball near the middle of the field. In the third quarter the High School, by line bucks and end runs, carried the ball to Donaldson's 25-yard line, only to lose the ball on an incomplete forward pass. During the latter part of the last quarter Donaldson recovered a punt on High School's 20-yard line but on a tackle play the locals held them and time was up.

For Donaldson every man played well, but the stars were McFall, Cook, Stowe and McNeill. McFall's punting was superb and he proved the best ground gainer and surest defensive player for the Cadets. The whole Wilmington team played a good game. Wells, C. Burnett, Parsley, Meier, McKoy and Hicks deserve especial mention.

The line-up of the teams was as follows: Wilmington, Wells, centre; Penny, right guard; McKoy, left guard; C. Burnett, right tackle; Meier, left tackle; Merriman, right end; Taylor, left end; Parsley, quarter back; Hicks, left halfback; Boone, right halfback; Burnett (captain) fullback. Donaldson, Stowe, centre; Cloud, right guard; Hinson, left guard; Hubbard, right tackle; Smith and McNeill, left tackle; Cook, right end; Lilly, left end; McFall, quarterback; Sidbury, left halfback; Faison, right halfback; Jones, fullback.

The officials of the game were: Referee, Mr. Schulken (Bingham School); umpire, Mr. Huntington (Davidson); field judge, Mr. Vind (Johns Hopkins); head linesman, Mr. Robinson, (Davidson); time keepers, Prof. Boushall (University of North Carolina); Prof. McFall (Columbia University).

Wilmington plays Raleigh High School here on Thanksgiving for the championship of the State among the High schools. A great game is expected as this is a holiday and the two teams are well matched.

THE HOOKWORM CAMPAIGN

C. F. Strosnider in the City for a Brief Visit—Now Working in Sampson County—People Deeply Interested.

Dr. C. F. Strosnider, formerly of the staff of the James Walker Memorial Hospital of this city, but now of the hookworm commission of the North Carolina State Board of Health, with headquarters in Goldsboro, arrived here yesterday for a brief visit to friends, of which he has many in this city.

Dr. Strosnider is one of three physicians sent out by the State health department to inform the people of the nature of the hookworm disease and of its dire results and he says that there has been a wonderful change of sentiment among the people regarding this disease and that those behind the movement for its eradication are meeting with co-operation everywhere.

Dr. Strosnider is now working in Sampson county. Last week he and Prof. Matthews, superintendent of public instruction of that county, visited every school in the northern portion of Sampson, and this week will visit the school in the southern portion of the county, completing his work in Sampson December 1st. He then goes to Wayne county, where he will be for some weeks. The other representatives are holding similar meetings in other sections of the State. Dr. Strosnider stated that out of the total number of rural schools he had visited he had not found a single school where hookworm infection was less than 55 per cent., ranging up to 85 per cent. He thinks that Dr. Chas. W. Stiles, who isnow in the city and who will deliver a lecture at the Boys' Brigade tomorrow night, is one of the most practical scientists of the age and perhaps doing more for the people of the South than any other scientist.

The regular monthly meeting of the New Hanover County Teachers' Association will be held next Saturday and Prof. Washington Catlett, superintendent of public instruction, stated yesterday afternoon that if possible he would have Dr. Strosnider present to deliver an address on hookworm disease. He will write Dr. Strosnider at once asking him to address the teachers next Saturday.

ROOM NEEDED—I will sell all repair work if not called for in 30 days. I need the room for new repair work coming in. J. T. Burke, the Jeweler. **

CAPE FEAR CHAPTER ELECTS OFIFECRS.

Cape Fear Chapter held its regular November meeting yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock at the W. L. I. Armory. The inclemency of the weather prevented there being a very large attendance, but the meeting was an enthusiastic and interesting one.

Many matters were discussed, and most of them disposed of. It was decided to take up at once the raising of the chapter's pledge of $100 to the monument to the Boy Soldiers at Chapel Hill. This is an object that should appeal especially to the alumni of the University, but there are many others who may care to make a contribution to this monument in memory of loved ones who once studied within those historic walls, and the chapter will be glad to receive any gifts made through it to this cause. Almost all the counties in the State have contributed liberally, and there is none which should do so more generously than New Hanover.

A contribution was received for the museum which was of much interest to the members of the chapter—a table napkin that belonged to the officers mess of Co. E. and is so marked in one corner, that was found among the effects of the late Capt. Richard Langdon.

There was one matter upon which the chapter took action only with the greatest reluctance; the dropping from the roll call of the names of five delinquents, but according to the constitution it was obligatory. That states that all members who have not paid their dues within four months after the annual meeting on January 19th shall be dropped, but Cape Fear Chapter deferred taking any action until the meeting yesterday, and will now be glad to reinstate those members to membership, upon payment of all back dues.

The following were appointed the Wreath Committee for this month: Mrs. Walker Taylor, Mrs. M. L. Stover, Miss Carrie White. In this connection the officers of the chapter wish to say that they would esteem it a great favor if, when one of our veterans passes away they be notified of it, as often they do not know until too late to send the laurel wreath which they consider it their privilege in being allowed to make, in time for the funeral.

The stamps for the benefit of the Arlington Monument Fund can be purchased from members of the chapter or from Yates' Book Store. These are dainty little seals, adorned with a cotton bell and the insignia of the U. D. C. with the word "greetings" below, and it is hoped the proceeds from them will be large. They will in no ways conflict with the sale of the Red Cross stamp, as they are not a stamp for Christmas use only but for use at any time.

Election of officers being declared in order, the old board was reelected unanimously, with the exception of Mrs. W. M. Creasy, corresponding secretary, who having been elected State Custodian of Crosses at the convention in Rocky Mount, declined re-election, and Mrs. E. K. Bryan was elected to that office. The officers for the year are as follows:

President—Mrs. Junius Davis.

Vice-President—Mrs. F. L. Huggins.

Recording Secretary—Mrs. Richard Price.

Corresponding Secretary—Mrs. E. K. Bryan.

Treasurer—Mrs. J. M. Woolvin.

Registrar—Mrs. M. S. Willard.

Custodian of Crosses—Mrs. William M. Parsley.

Historian—Miss Hettie James.

The re-elected officers thanked the members of the honor they had done them, in having once tried that they still wish to retain them in office, and there being no further business upon motion the meeting adjourned.

IN MEMORIAM.

"He who has watched the sun in its bright course through the firmament and seen it gradually decline until it went down in darkness beneath the horison, may turn from the contemplation with no feelings of sorrow or regret, for he knows that the period of its absence is mercifully ordained as a season of necessary repose to him and to all, and that the morrow will restore its beams to revive and reanimate all nature. But if the last declining ray which struck upon his eyelids had brought to him the conviction that he had gazed for the last time upon the sun in the heaven—that henceforward there was to be no more rising nor setting, no morning nor evening nor light, nor heat—no effulgent day, with all its glorious beauties and excellencies; but night and darkness, unrelieved save by the twinkling stars, were to be the law of earth forever—with what sensations would the poor wanderer view that last setting of the sun!

"With feelings somewhat akin to those I have imagined we behold the death of the great and good whom we love and reverence. But now, they were here, with all the generous impulses and excelling virtues that dignify and adorn humanity clustering thickly around them. We rejoiced in their presence, we were better under their benignant influence, we were happy in thir smiles—we felt that it was day, and looked not into the future. They are gone. The places of earth shall know them no more forever. The mysterious law which loosens the silver cord and breaks the pitcher at the fountain, penetrates the heart. The darkness and the thick night of desolation are upon us. But we have more than the pale rays of the twinkling stars still left to guide and cheer. By the light of their lofty deeds and kindly virtues memory gazes back into the past, and is content. By the light of Revelation hope looks beyond the grave into the bright day of immortality, and is happy."

These eloquent words of George Davis, uttered many years ago in the First Presbyterian Church, on Front street, at a gathering of our inhabitants, on the death of Henry Clay, are recalled, upon the demise on yesterday of one of his devoted contemporaries, our venerable and beloved fellow citizen, B. G. Worth, at the ripe age of eight-eight and a half years, whose honored career, a living epistle, known and read of all men, has been for more than half a century a benediction upon the people of Wilmington; for this man, like Enoch of old, walked with God and was not, for God took him to Himself.

Preeminent as a ship owner in the maritime affairs of our port in antebellum times, when nearly a hundred sailing vessels lined our busy wharves or waited at anchor in the stream, he lived through peace and war through pestilence and famine to peace again, always abounding in the work which had been given him to do and which he did so well that his labor has not been in vain.

He was the last survivor of more than fifty old time merchants of Wilmington of 1856, eminent among whom were the intrepid spirits who had builded the Wilmington and Weldon railroad. "A galaxy of moral excellence the most perfect, of intellectual ability the most eminent, of fidelity the most unwavering," in the annals of the Cape Fear.

Closely identified with our civil and religious development, since the date mentioned until his death, his patriotic spirit, his guiding hand, his consecrated devotion, have been manifest in the public life; and those of us who loved him best, and who have attended him in his daily walk and conversation, who knew more intimately his gentle, sympathetic nature, his gracious, dignified demeanor, his beaming benevolent countenance, his cordial, unaffected affability, his sweet simplicity, and who have heard from his lips the blessed words of the Master, whom he served so long and so faithfully, are now thankful that we lived in the light of his beautiful example, for, we have marked the perfect man, and we have beheld the upright, and we know that his end is peace.

There was no austerity nor querulousness in his old age; his heart was always young. The orb of his day had indeed long since set, but like the cloud lifted high and motionless above the gray twilight in the west, he was still radiant with the warm glow of the setting sun.

On the first Sunday morning of the New Year, with characteristic humility, he addressed his friends, assembled on a solemn occasion, on the subject of the loving kindness of his Lord, and of the time of his departure, which he felt was not far distant. He urged them to remember throughout the year, the admonition of the apostle and evangel in his closing words to the Philippians, and particularly to think constantly upon the things which are true, and honest, and just, and pure, and the God of Peace would abide with them; and, as he spoke, with quavering voice and tottering frame, to men and women, the grandchildren of those who had long since been his yoke fellows in Christian work, his shining face, bronzed and furrowed by the battles of a strenuous and eventful life, seemed to reflect the glory of the coming victory over the last enemy—Death.

He will be missed in the councils of the Church and in the session of its Elders, which he had punctually attended for forty-nine years: He will be missed by his fellow travellers upon the journey of life, whom he had so often comforted and assisted on the way; and by his bereaved family, whose final devotion made happy his declining years; and the shadow will also fall upon places which had been made glad by his bountiful benefactions.

Well might he have said with the apostle: I have fought a good fight. I have finished my course, I have kept the faith. Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous Judge, shall give me at that day, and not to me only, but to all them also that love his appearing.

FOR THE WOMAN THAT'S FAT.

A Detroit physician says that the cheapest and safest mixture a fat woman who wants to get thin can use is ¼ ounce Marmola (get it in the original ½ ounce package), ½ ounce Fluid Extract Cascara Aromatic and 3½ ounces Peppermint Water. The proper amount to take is a teaspoonful after meals and at bedtime.

These ingredients may be obtained from any druggist at small cost, and make a combination that is not only excellent as a fat reducer, being able, it is claimed, to take off a pound a day without causing wrinkles, but is also a splendid help to the system as a whole, regulating the stomach and bowels (where the fat person's troubles begin), and clearing the skin of pimples and blotches. No exercise is required to help the remedy in its work and, best of all, no dieting is necessary while taking it—you can eat what you like.

PULLMAN SERVICE NEEDED.

Patrons Petition Seaboard Air Line People for Accommodation.

The Star learns with gratification that there is a revival of interest in the effort to have the Seaboard Air Line provide Pullman service on its trains 44 and 45 between Wilmington and Charlotte, similar to the service now given by the Coast Line on its Wilmington and Florence trains. The absence of this accommodation on the Seaboard Air Line has long been a matter of complaint and it is believed that with the very strong petition that will shortly be forwarded to headquarters from all important points along the line that the service will be granted. There is also talk in Seaboard circles of another passenger train on the old Carolina Central division.

Mrs. W. E. Cox Bereaved.

Mrs. W. E. Cox, wife of Rev. W. E. Cox, rector of St. John's Episcopal Church, received a telegram late Friday night conveying to her the sad intelligence of the death of her eldest brother, Mr. Thomas O'Connor, which occurred suddenly the same night at his home in Knoxville, Tenn., of hemorrhage of the brain. Mrs. Cox left yesterday morning for Knoxville to attend the funeral services. Many friends will deeply sympathize with her in her bereavement.

QUIET IN THE COTTON MARKET

Trading and Fluctuations Irregular With a Narrow Range—There Was No Special Bull Support —Close Barely Steady.

New York, Nov. 1.—The cotton maket was quiet during today's trading and fluctuations were irregular within a comparative narrow range as a result of evening up for over the census report which is to be published at the opening on Monday morning. The close was barely steady net unchanged to three points lower.

The market opened steady at unchanged prices a decline of 7 points under scattering liquidations and in sympathy with Liverpool cables. There was not much cotton for sale, however, suggesting that small line accounts had been pretty well prepared for the census report earlier in the week and during the middle of the morning prices rallied to a net advance of 6 to 8 points on covering. But there was no special bull support and after the short interest had been reduced somewhat the market eased off again under realizing with the active months closing a point or two under the closing figures of last night as a rule.

There appeared to be no change in expectations as to the probable showing of the ginning report and nothing in the general news of sufficient importance to inspire fresh business before the publication of figures, which are expected to be somewhat between 880,000 and 9,000,000 bales. Private cables from Liverpool reported a quiet and featureless market at that point and the showing of the week and figures had been foreshadowed before the close of yesterday's market here. Reviews of the dry goods situation were closely in line with reports received during the week, sales at Fall River being smaller on talk of renewed curtailment based on the unsatisfactory range of prices. The leading English authority estimates the average weekly consumption of cotton by British mills during October at 60,000 bales against 65,000 last year and by the continent 105,000 for the same of last year.

Receipts at the ports today were 53,610 bales against 47,479 last week and 26,661 last year. For the week 375,000 bales against 414,823 last week and 269,576 last year. Today's receipts at New Orleans 13,796 bales against 6,300 last year.

Spot closed quiet 5 points higher; middling uplands 14.55; middling gulf 14.80; no sales.

Futures opened steady and closed barely steady.

AN ADVANCE SHOWN IN STOCKS

Market Retained Its Professional Limitations Yesterday—Indications of Easing Money Conditions.

New York, Nov. 19.—The stock market retained its professional limitations today, but prices continued to advance. Union Pacific and United States Steel practically rose to the highest prices on the present movement and Reading was not far below. The indications of easing money conditions made a sustaining influence. The current of the money movement towards New York was regarded as ending the crop moving requirements of the interior and foreshadowing a recuperation of reserve holdings of the New York banks.

Keen interest in a football game at New Haven almost overshadowed the stock market and accounted partly for the dullness of the dealings.

Slight attention was given to the fact of an increase in the reported surplus of idle freight cars for the two weeks ending November, making a turn in a series of decreases which had been in progress since the first half of July and which had practically wiped out the surplus car supply.

The increase, while small, must be allowed significance as marking a possible maximum in the freight movement for the Fall.

A decided falling off in the supply of cotton and grain bills in the foreign exchange market may be an additional indication of the same fact.

The feature of the bank statement was the heavy transfer of deposits and loans from trust companies to clearing house banks, occasioned by the decline in interest rates during the week. There were decreases in the weekly averages of "other banks and trust companies" of $19,566,800, in deposits, $18,785,500 in loans, and $1,690,800 in cash. This transfer seems to have been neutralized in the actual showing of the clearing house banks by loan contraction in other quarters, including stock market liquidation so that the loan increase only reached the nominal sum of $652,700. Evidently the shifting from the trust companies did help to benefit the cash showing of the banks, the actual cash increase of over $9,000,000, comparing with preliminary estimates of only $2,000,000. There follows the gratifying consequence of a further material shrinkage in the excess of the loan over the deposit item.

Bonds were steady. Total sales par value $1,260,000. Total sales stocks 200,400 shares.

HUBBARD BROS. REVIEW.

Effect on Ginners' Report Monday—Crop Estimates a Factor.

(Special Star Telegram.)

New York, Nov. 19.—Today the fluctuations of a small market reflect the desire on the part of the trade to be without any interest over the publication of the government ginners' report on Monday. During the first hour a small short interest covered, and then the hedge selling by spot houses, together with long selling on the very heavy interior receipts, brought the market slowly to about last evening's prices. Nothing could represent the uncertain attitude of the trade in face of heavy receipts and low crop estimates better than the record of today's market. The majority of crop estimates are so low that the trade become bullish, then receipts became heavy and they sell out. This has been the cause of the market for a month and shows lack of positive conviction as to the future course of prices except among a very few persons, whose ideas of the crop are as wide apart as the poles.

is the last game Carolina plays before going up against Virginia. The South Carolinians scored in the last minute after an intercepted forward pass and a run for 70 yards by Knight, of South Carolina.

North Carolina scored in every quarter and changed the line-up continuously as the game progressed. Porter, Ruffin and Belk were the particularly bright stars for North Carolina, while Stoney and Knight for South Carolina did excelent work.

North Carolina played tricks, but gained consistently by line drives. The line-up:

V. M. I. and Georgetown.

Washington, Nov. 19.—In one of the most poorly played games of the season Georgetown University today defeated the Virginia Military Institute 14 to 6, but suffered the humiliation of having her goal crossed for the first time by a Southern team.

Fumbling on both sides was frequent. Georgetown scored her first touchdown within three minutes after the start of the game. On the third formation, Costello broke through with a remarkable piece of broken field running, ran 60 yards for a touchdown. From there until the third quarter Georgetown was helpless.

The Virginians made their touchdown in the second quarter as the result of straight football.

In the third quarter Walsh was substituted for Sitterding and after a series of line plunges which put the ball on the Virginian 25-yard line, he dropped back and kicked a goal from the field. In the final quarter Dunn went in for Krafts and after a series of line plunges and a forward pass which netted them 20 yards, he carried the ball over for the final touchdown. The summary:

Wake Forest Easy for A. & M.

Raleigh, N. C., Nov. 19.—A. & M. defeated Wake Forest at Wake Forest today 28 to 3. The Varsity entirely, was used during the first quarter, scoring 22 points. At the beginning of the second quarter several substitutes were put in but A. & M. scored five more points. At the beginning of the third quarter, the entire scrub team substituted for the Varsity, Wake Forest making her only score by a drop kick by Utley. There was no scoring by either team in the last quarter.

A. & M. depended entirely on end runs, and line smashing for her gains; while Wake Forest used forward passes twice to advantage. Wake Forest did not make first down against the Varsity or at any time in the first half. In the last two quarters the ball was mostly in scrub team's territory, owing to many fumbles.

Summary: Referee, Jackson, Randolph-Macon. Umpire Rowe, Gettysburg. Field Judge, Crozier. Head linesman, Hoffman. Time keepers, Wake Forest, Broughton: A. & M., Bowler. Goals by Bray, 3. Attendance 600.

Michigan Western Champion.

Ann Harbor, Mich., Nov. 19.—The Maize and Blue floats over the maroon and gold tonight, for Michigan by a score of 6 to 0 captured the Western football championship from Minnesota, on Ferry field this afternoon.

The clean cut forward passes did it. It was in the last quarter. Neither side had been able to shatter the other's defense and the crowd of 15,000 had resigned themselves to a no run tie game. It was Michigan's ball in the center of the field. Wells, whose name is written larger tonight, ran out and sent the ball straight to Borieske. The crowd cheered itself hoarse for this was one of the few successful forward passes of the game and it had netted 26 yards.

MR. SMALL RETURNS.

Back From Florida, Talks Interestingly of The State.

(Special Star Correspondence.)

Washington, N. C., Nov. 19.—Congressman John H. Small has just returned from Pensacola, Fla., where he attended the annual convention of the Mississippi to Atlantic Inland Waterway Association. In response to a request from your correspondent, Mr. Small made a brief statement as to the meeting of this Association and some of his impressions on the trip.

"The Waterway Association," said Mr. Small, "was organized several years ago to promte Congressional legislation for the construction of a waterway across the State of Florida, connecting the Atlantic with the Gulf of Mexico and thence an inside route from St. George's Bay on the Gulf coast by a protected route to the Mississippi river and New Orleans. A survey with a favorable report was made some years ago for a route across the Peninsular of Florida, which begun on the St. John's river on the East coast and thence almost a direct line to the nearest point on the Gulf coast near St. George's Bay. Another survey was authorized by Congress in the River and Harbor Act of March, 1909, the report on which has not yet been submitted. This project is intended to be merely a continuance of the Intra Coastal Waterway from Boston to Florida, affording a protected passage from the Mississippi and Gulf against incomers, nor of any complaint by new settlers as to the manner in which they had been received. They appear to extend a glad welcome to anyone who will settle among them and help build up the Land of Flowers.

"It is quite apparent that a large number of the people of that State appreciate the value of publicity. Every city and town has its active Board of Trade and one of their primary purposes appears to be the gathering of data and information regarding their community and section, and publishing it with attractive illustrations, and distributing the same throughout the country. Ports to the waterway and ports and rivers along the Atlantic Seaboard. Congressman J. Hampton Moore, of Philadelphia, president of the Atlantic Deeper Waterways Association, also attended, and our purpose was to invite the co operation of the Association in the Gulf States with the Association which is promoting the construction of the Waterway from Boston to Florida. Mr. Moore and I were most cordially received. I believe that there will hereafter be greater activity on the part of the Senators and Representatives from the Gulf States of these two great projects."

When asked about Pensacola, Mr. Small said: "This is a city of 30,000 people with diversified industries and possesses a magnificient harbor with a present depth of 35 feet. A large navy yard is maintained at this port."

Asked about Florida, Mr. Small said: "There were among others two distinct impressions made on my mind. One was the large number of settlers from other States who have moved into Floriada, and the other was the enthusiasm of the people for Florida and the effort made to advertise the State abroad. Many people from other States have made their homes there and the movemnt still continues. Strangers are apparently welcomed and no discrimination is either felt or practiced against them, and they are at once adopted as a part of the citizenship. I made many inquiries and did not hear of the slightest jealousy upon the part of native-born residents This custom has undoubtedly helped to attract settlers to the State.

"The State of Florida is engaged in reclaming swamp lands by drainage on a large scale. Surveys and plans have been made and contracts have been let for the drainage of thousands of acres of lands in the Everglades, the result of which will be to provide a large area of most fertile lands. No trouble is contemplated in the sale of these lands, in fact much has been sold in advance of the completion of drainage."

AFFAIRS AT STATE CAPITAL

Mrs. Mooneyhan Recovering—Davidson County Fair—Supervision of Railroad Scales—Organizing for Good Rads.

(Special Star Correspondence.)

Raleigh, N. C., Nov. 19.—There is the gratifying indication now that Mrs. A. H. Mooneyhan will recover from the terrible injuries she sustained in the automobile accident at the aviation and automobile meet held by the Raleigh News & Observer this week. There has been little or no hope for her recovery until today when the statement is made by attending physicians that she has taken a turn for the better and is really doing nicely. There has been only the one death—Ada Bryant, colored, of Durham—thus far and all the other five injured are doing nicely.

A mass meeting is called for Wake county to consider problems of furthering the interest of good road construction throughout the county, the meeting to be December 5th in this city, the specific object being the organization of a County Good Roads Association.

Commissioner of Agriculture W. A. Graham, just back from Lexington, says the Davidson county fair this week was remarkably successful, especially for the first effort in this direction that the county has ever made. It was really a street fair and the agricultural exhibits were remarkably good. The showing of cattle was nothing like what it should have been, but with assurances of ample and well equipped grounds for the 1911 fair the prospect is for a fair that will strike a high standard in every department of exhibits.

The Raleigh Woman's Club has just paid off a $1,500 mortgage on its club house fronting the State house on the west. This gives the ladies a club building property worth fully $10,000 free from encumbrance.

The force of convicts for construction work on the Statesville Air Line Railroad is being increased right along now. A squad of 50 were sent from the penitentiary a week ago and seven others were sent yesterday.

That shippers not only in North Carolina, but in all parts of the country, are complaining of incorrectness of scale rates of railroads and that the remedying of this evil is a decided problem, is the statement of Corporation Commissioner H. C. Brown, of the North Carolina Corporation Commission, just back from Washington, D. C., where he attended the annual convention of the National Association of Railway Commissioners. This matter came up before the commissioners under the topic of "Delayed settlement of claims" and it was quickly evident that the incorrectness of railway scales is causing shippers and consignees loss and annoyance.

Speaking for himself, Mr. Brown says he is in favor of the Legislature placing railroad scales under the supervision of the Corporation Commission with power to employ an expert scales man to examine and test all such scales from time to time and further authorizing the commission to require the reweighing of shipments when it was apparent there was loss in transit.

The Planters' Guano Co., Dunn, Harnett county, was chartered today with $100,000 capital authorized and $5,000 capital subscribed by P. S. Cooper and others.

Master Chas. O'Hagan Grimes, son of Secretary of State J. Bryan Grimes, has presented to the North Carolina Hall of History a sword that was captured from a Yankee early in the Civil War by his great-grandfather, Dr. Chas. J. O'Hagan, surgeon of Ransom's Brigade, and used by him during nearly the entire four years of the war.

GOVERNOR DAVIE'S PORTRAIT

Presented to State by Society of the Sons of Revolution—Address by J. O. Carr, Esq., of Wilmington Bar.

(Raleigh News and Observer, 16th.)

Of State-wide interest was the scene enacted in the Senate chamber of North Carolina yesterday afternoon, when the North Carolina Society of the Sons of the Revolution, which was in session here yesterday, presented to the State the portrait of one of its Revolutionary Governors, William Richardson Davie, who in 1798 was the Chief Executive, the portrait of this early Governor making a notable addition to the already large collection of portraits of North Carolina governors.

The Senate Chamber was crowded for the occasion, and among those in attendance were delegates of young ladies from St. Mary's School, Peace Institute and Meredith College. The audience was one representative of the best life of the city, and the greatest of interest was manifested in the proceedings. Presiding over the meeting was Col. J. Bryan Grimes, vice-president of the Sons of the Revolution, who did this in the absence of Col. Thomas S. Kenan, the president, whose illness kept him away but who sent a message of greeting. The presentation of the portrait was made by Mr. J. O. Carr, a member of the society, an able and talented attorney of Wilmington, and the acceptance on behalf of the State was by Hon. Thomas W. Bickett, the Attorney General. During the meeting music was rendered by an orchestra. The invocation and benediction were by Bishop Joseph Blount Cheshire, of the Diocese of North Carolina.

The Portrait of Davie.

Immediately in front of the dias of the President of the Senate was the portrait of Governor William Richardson Davie, the oil painting being by Mr. Jacques Busbee, of this city. It was in a handsome gilt frame and represented the Revolutionary Governor in the costume of that age, with powdered wig, the head and upper portion of the body being shown, the portrait being a handsome one.

The Exercises Begin.

The exercises began with music, "The Old North State" and "Hail, Columbia" being rendered by the orchestra. At the close of these selections Colonel Grimes presented Bishop Cheshire, who made the invocation, the audience joining in repeating the "Lord's Prayer."

Introduction by Col. J. Bryan Grimes

In introducing the speaker of the day, Mr. James O. Carr, of Wilmington, a member of the Society, to present the portrait, Col. Grimes said:

"Ladies and gentlemen—We celebrate this afternoon the seventeenth anniversary of the organization of the North Carolina Society of the Sons of the Revolution. Want of interest in her history has long been a reproach to our State and has caused us to be neglected in the history of our country and almost disdained by our more pretentious neighbors. Our people have in too many cases been ignorant of their own State's greatness and unable to assert or maintain her proper position among our sister States. In the past decade there has been a most gratifying patrotic awakening among our people. Our own writers and the historians of the country are beginning to recognize the heoric part our State played in the building of the nation and in the life of the republic.

"Among the great agencies that have brought about this change are the various patriotic societies formed in this state to preserve the fame and perpetuate the memory of our great men and celebrate the remarkable events in the history of North Carolina. Of these may be mentioned the United Daughters of the Confederacy, North Carolina Society of Colonial Dames, North Carolina Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution, North Carolina Society Daughters of the Revolution, the Society of the Cincinnati, the North Carolina Literary and Historical Association, the State Historical Commission and the varous historical societies, and last, but not least, the North Carolina Society of the Sons of the Revolution.

"This organization was instituted to pepetuate the memory of the men and times of the Revolution, and to keep alive 'The Spirit of '76.' At the organization of the North Carolina Society of the Sons of the Revolution in 1893, Governor Elias Carr was chosen its first president; our next president was the late lamented Dr. Peter E. Hines and our third present president is that gallant soldier and loyal Carolinian, Col. Thomas S. Kenan, who from his sick couch, sends you love and patriotic greetings. Among the officers selected then were Mr. Marshall Delancy Haywood as secretary, Dr. D. H. Hill as registrar, Rev. Robert B. Drane as chaplin, and these three gentlemen have held those in position continuously since that time and we still delight to honor them.

"The Society is devoting itself largely to the Revolutionary part of our history. Among its patriotic activities may be mentioned the presentation of the Supreme Court of North Carolina oil portraits of Alfred Moore and James Iredell, Revolutionary patriots and later Associate Justices of the Supreme Court of the United States. It has also presented to the State of North Carolina oil portraits of Governors Samuel Johnston, Alexander Martin and Abner Nash. The State of North Carolina now owns oil portraits of all the Revolutionary patriots who occupied the gubernatorial chair whose likenesses are known to exist, except Richard Dobbs Spaight, Benjamin Smith and William Richardson Davie. We hope soon to be able to present not only portraits of Governors Spaight and Smith, but as our membership grows we expect to commemorate with handsome tablets or busts some other notable men or events in the Revolutionary history of North Carolina.

"This afternoon the Society presents to the State a portrait of William Richardson Davie—soldier, statesman and patriot. We are peculiarly fortunate in having with us a member of the society, an able lawyer and well known historical writer who will address you upon 'The Career of Governor William Richardson Davie.' I introduce to you Mr. J. O. Carr."

The Presentation Address.

The presentation address of Mr. James O. Carr, of Wilmington, a member of the Society, was an eloquent and clear-cut recital of the salient points in the life of Davie, the speaker paying tribute to his services to the State and dwelling with emphasis upon the main points of the life of a man wso in his day had held high position in State and county, and who as the representative abroad of the United States had attracted the attention of the world.

First paying a tribute to Colonel Kenan, president of the society, as one who had first led him to the study of history, Mr. Carr, after the formal words presenting the portrait, declared that the orator only expresses his opinions of greatness, but that he who gathers facts of a life or an epoch may render lasting service. Referring then to Davie as a statesman of ripe experience and great learning he spoke of the services rendered by him as a young man, tracing his life from his birth in England on June 20, 1756, until death claimed him. Brought to America at the age of five, he was adopted by his maternal uncle, Rev. William Richardson, and his early life was spent at Waxhaw, just across the line in South Carolina.

Then as to items in Davie's life Mr. Carr said: "By the end of the Revolutionary War, Davie, then but 25, had made a great military reputation. At the age of 31 he attracted great attention by his course in the Continental Congress. At 32 he was the leader of the forces in North Carolina urging the adoption of the Constitution. At 33 his speech in the General Assembly for public education and of the need of a State University had a most important effect. In 1798 at the age of 42 he was appointed Brigadier General United States Army by President Adams, and in the same year was elected as the Governor of North Carolina. In 1799 he was one of the envoys to France in the making of the treaty of that year. Before he was 45 years of age, he had rendered services which made him a man of renown.

Mr. Carr spoke of his educational influences being good, that he received instructin at home, at Charlotte and at Nassau Hall at Princeton, from which place he was called by the clash of arms in the Revolution, that he volunteered and afterwards returned to Prnceton and graduated; that he studied law and was admitted to the bar in this State, but abandoned its practice for military duties, which he had begun at the age of 20, and that his career was such that no American officer merited a higher reputation for so brave and fine a record.

His career at the bar was declared to be a brilliant one, that he was a man highy equipped, and that he was the first to obtain from the Supreme Court the decision that the court had a right to declare an act of the Legislature unconstitutional. His work and great influence in the Legislature were next discussed, it being stated that he was in this body a man whose views were held in high regard, that he had no superior in the legislative halls and that he was familiar with all State details. The speaker declared that perhaps the greatest speech Gen. Davie ever made was on his bill for the creation of the State University, and that he is fittingly remembered as the "Father of the University," and that he had, moving aside from the classical courses then prevailing, stood for the optional courses as they exist today.

The force and power of Davie in having North Carolina adopt the Constitution was next discussed and in detail Mr. Carr told of Davie as a delegate, being the first from one of the larger States to vote for the section giving two Senators to each State, that he was a powerful advocate who came to the aid of the smaller States which needed a large State to secure this representation. His worth as Governor of North Carolina was shown and it was declared that when he was appointed an envoy to France that he was requested to accept only on the condition that he take up the duties at the last possible moment. The high position he attained as a statesman was emphasized, that though he was the second on the Commission, Napoleon directed his remarks chiefly to him and gave him high evidences of his esteem.

His position as a Federalist was defined, that he believed in an aristocracy based on intelligence, that he was a follower of Hamilton rather than of Jefferson, and then came a reference to his defeat for Congress by Willis Alston, a follower of Jefferson and his removal to Waxhaw, S. C.

INDUSTRIAL UNDERTAKINGS

Enterprises of Pitch and Moment Reported in This Week's Issue of Manufacturers' Record—Waterpower Development

Baltimore, Nov. 17.—Enterprises of great pith and moment are reported in this week's issue of the Manufacturers' Record as having been organized during the past week to operate in the South in the development of waterpowers, mining operations and diversified manufacturing.

Pennsylvania and other Eastern capitalists have organized, under the name of the Georgia Power Company, a $20,000,000 company which purchased a number of waterpowers in North Georgia and have let contracts for development work aggregating about $10,000,000, while Eastern capitalists in connection with Chattanoogo men have organized the Durham Coal and Iron Company with headquarters in the latter city for the purpose of purchasing coal mining companies now in operation and about 63,000 acres of coal land, the present annual capacity of these mines being about 1,000,000 tons and which it is proposed to increase to 3,000,000 or 4,000,000, tons yearly production. Associated with this enterprise, and really one of the chief factors in its organization, is Mr. B. F. Bush, President of the Western Maryland Railroad Company which is now extending its line at a cost of $12,000,000 through Western Maryland to make connection with Pittsburgh, and who is also president of a number of large coal operating companies in the West, these facts indicating the probable financial strength back of this Chattanooga undertaking.

Among other important enterprises reported by the Manufacturers' Record for the week have been the following:

Blackwood Coal & Coke Co., Blackwood, Va., will develop lands estimated to contain 20,000,000 tons of coal and 40,000,000 feet of lumber; will build 8-foot band saw mill, power house, tipple, etc.; Philadelphia capitalists are understood to control this enterprise.

Tensas River Lumber Co., Natchez, Miss., was organized with $100,000 capital stock and will develop over 70,000 acres of hardwood timber land in Concordia Parish, La.; is now constructing a 2-mile standard gauge railway to sit where a 36 by 100 foot saw mill building will be erected and equpped.

Gulf Refining Co., Pittsburg, which has large oil interests at Port Arthur, Texas, has decided on extensive improvements at that place and will dredge waterway 2 miles long, build a dock 1,500 feet long and construct racks for supporting pipe lines to load oil into bulk vessels, etc.

Oklahoma Electrical Terminal Co., Oklahoma City, will construct buildings of re-inforced concrete and plans an ultimate expenditure of $50,000.

Kentucky Rock-Asphalt & Coal Co., Bowling Green, Ky., has incorporated and wil develop 2,700 acres of rock asphalt, coal and timber land; plans a daily output of 200 tons of rock asphalt; erecting a by-product for axtracting liquid asphalt, etc.; construction to cost from $75,000to $150,000.

Southern Pacific Terminal Co., Galveston, Texas, is planing to rebuld Pier "C," recently burned at a loss of $120,000, and to build fireproof warehouses.

Orleans Manufacturing Co., New Orleans, awarded contract for the construction of a five-story reinforced-concrete building costing about $95,000 and will install casket making machinery.

Gulf Lumber Co., St. Louis, will rebuild its planing mill at Stables, La., recently burned, with loss of $100,000.

Old Dominion Steamship Co., New York, is reported as considering plans for the construction of warehouses and piers to cost $750,000 at Lambert's Point, Norfolk, Va., though the improvements will not be definitely decided upon for several months.

Deen Turpentine Co., Jacksonville, Fla., was organized with $100,000 capital stock to operate on a tract of timber land in Polk county.

Corinth Chair Co., Corinth, Miss., has plans for five buildings for a chair factory it will build at North Mobile, Ala.

GIRL OF FIVE WALKS AT LAST

Pathetic Story of Little Mountain Girl Who Gets Use of Limbs Deformed and Paralyzed for Life. Her Rescue.

(Selene Armstrong in Washington, D. C. Times.)

The tireless patter of two little feet, now as straight and strong as other people's, and a child's timid, half frightened laugh of wonder and happiness are heard today in the corridors of the New Willard Hote.

If grouchy guests, who have wandered past remembrance from the happy land of childhood, look askance at the little girl who seems to have discovered the principle of perpetual motion, and to derive a certain ecstacy from putting it into practice, tney are told that Gertrude McIntosh is using her feet for the first time in all her life of nearly five long, tragic years.

And who, pray, after finding that he owned a pair of perfectly good, usable, everyday feet could resist the temptation to take a few turns up and down the corridor?

One year ago, Gertrude McIntosh, now straight and slim like other little girls, and beloved, as it was intended little girls should be, was a child with mal-formed, horribly twisted legs and feet that were a cruel parody upon the freedom of childhood. Like a bit of driftwood from the sea of human wreckage, she had found a temporary refuge in the poorhouse of Yancey county, North Carolina, to which she had been taken by her widowed mother from their cabin home in the fastness of the North Carolina mountains.

To the love of a childless man and woman, and the magic of a physicians skill, the child owes a cure more remarkable than any effected by a surgeon's knife, within the annals of modern surgery. For in the straightening of the twisted feet and legs no knife has been employed, no bones broken, and not a drop of blood spilled.

Twelve months ago little Gertrude McIntosh was removed from the Yancey county poorhouse by Superintendent and Mrs. W. B. Streeter, of the Home for Dependent Children of North Carolina.

Mr. and Mrs. Streeter, who immediately made efforts to learn whether or not science could undo the cruel prank which nature had played when the malformed child came into the world, heard of the noted New York specialist in deformities, Dr. Reginald H. Sayre. They brought the case to his attention, and succeeded in interesting him in the little girl, with the result that this physician, who receives princely fees from the rich, agreed to

LESSONS IN ROAD BUILDING

How Trick is Turned in Southwest Texas—Co-operation of Counties and Results Obtained—Local Pride.

(Special Star Correspondence.)

San Antonio, Texas, Nov. 19.—In the absence of Federal or State aid for good roads Southwest Texas is setting about the solution of the good roads question in a mannen that may be of interest to scores of other States where the organization for directing the construction of good roads is poor.

In this State, as in a great many others, there is no provision for the construction of good roads by the State. This matter is entirely in the hands of the county officials. In a territory as sparsely settled as Southwest Texas still is, in spite of its enormous immigration, good roads are particularly necessary because the distances to be traveled are long. Imperative necessity has forced the counties to organize among themselves to direct this work. As in all other States there are some progressive counties which vote for good roads bonds and special taxes quite readily. Others refuse to do so. Now the proposition of each county is usually to get a good highway across several counties in addition to providing its own little network of good roads. Therefore, having voted bonds the county officials of the fortunate county takes up negotiations with the neighboring county through which a good road is desired on very much the same basis that one nation would negotiate a treaty with another. The obvious advantage of the good road in question is usually sufficient argument to induce the backward county to fall into line.

But the county having a good roads fund at its disposal has force as well as diplomacy at its command. Such a county, presuming that it has an obstinate neighbor to the north, can construct all county highways up to within two, three, four or five miles of the county line and then leave an intervening area of very bad roads. This very seldom fails to force the neighboring county to action.

Using these methods it is possible to drive a highway straight as the crow flies across several hundred miles of country where the per capita cost of good roads is comparatively high owing to the fact that Southwest Texas is far from being thickly populated. Such a proposition is now being handled between San Antonio and Corpus Christi. The Bureau of Good Roads at Washington was requested to send an expert to furnish the county officials information about routes and road material. Fay McClure was sent and has recently submitted his preliminary report. Commerical Clubs along the way and the San Antonio Chamber of Commerce are now lending their moral support to the propsition and there is little doubt that the next few months will see under way a road going straight from San Antonio to Corpus Christi through what was only a few years ago the very stronghold of the cattle baron. Undoubtedly no other means now at the command of those who realize the importance of good county roads could accomplish these results. A campaign to get Federal aid for good roads has been waged in a desultory manner, and thus far fruitlessly, for many years. State aid for roads in a sparse settled state always presents the difficulty that the money can be spent several hundred of miles away from at least three-fourths of the population.

It is interesting to observe what a dynamo of activity one county with a good roads fund at its command becomes. Some years ago Bexar county, of which San Antonio is the principal part, voted a bond issue of $500,000. With this a network of good roads was built that made the automobile loops of this scenic bit of territory nationally famous. Since then county roads have radiated in every direction from this city until now it is possible to make at least twenty trips to as many different towns within one hundred miles from San Antonio over roads which are in excellent condition all the year. The suggestion for all of these roads came from the example set by this one county.

In fact so successful have been the efforts of the good roads builders of Texas that a proposition is now being urged for the construction of a hghway that shall run due north and south from the Red River, the northern boundary of Texas, to the Rio Grande, the southern boundary. Such a road will be about 600 miles long. It will travel from blizzard swept prairie to a territory in which snow has never been seen. It will be long enough to cross at least two of any other States in the Union. That such a proposition should be seriously considered by a mere collection of counties is some indication of the results which Texasisobtaining in its efforts for good roads.

RAISING PECANS IN TEXAS

What is Being Done to Encourage Profitable Industry in That State. Some of Possibilities of the Crop.

(Special Star Correspondence.)

San Antonio, Texas, Nov. 19—Down in a quiet little part of Texas, there is a small village called Junction. It is one of the largest pecan markets in the world. Just at present the streets are lined with wagons loaded with pecans every day. Already, more than 300,000 pounds have been marketed there. Present indications are that the crop marketed at Junction will be more than 500,000 pounds.

This is a Southwest Texas crop to which practically no attention whatever is given. It is, nevertheless, one of the most profitable in the world. Some idea of the possibilities of its development may be gathered from the fact that the market price for pecans varies from 7 1-2 to 20 cents per pound. Few other products in the world vary so extensively in price. Throughout the South, however, some small effort is now being made to give attention to the pecan trees, with a view to improvement of the crop. As a result of this, the crop of some of the better trees is in demand for use by the nurseries. The crop of one tree at Junction has been contracted for by a nursery for the next five years at 35 cents a pound.

On some of the larger ranches of Southwest Texas, where there are several miles of river bottom, the income from the pecans is sufficient to pay 10 per cent. interest on the money invested in the ranch, in spite of the fact that absolutely no care is given the trees. As a means for pointing out the value of the pecan tree, the Texas State Nurserymen's Association has made an offer to the public schools of the State to supply the very finest of trees to every public school which will request—the trees to be planted in the school yards.

Efforts are also being made throughout the State by several organizations to induce the planting of pecan trees for shade. Strenuous efforts have been made in this part of the State to inform the owners of large numbers of pecan trees how to gather the crop without damaging the tree. In many places, trees have been severely damaged by the thrashing which brings down the pecans.

The production of nuts of all kinds in this country is becoming increasingly important. Government statistics show quite plainly that in spite of the great progress made with almonds, English walnuts, pecans, and others, the proportion of the total of nuts imported from other countries is steadily increasing. Many persons consider this due to the increased number of vegetarians in this country, and there is substantial indication that this is true. Present market conditions point to the pecan as one of the most profitable of Southern crops.

In closing his able and illuminating address Mr. Carr spoke of the portrait painted by Mr. Jacques Busbee, that presented to the State it would adorn the walls of the Capitol to stimulate future generations and lead them to aspire to better things.

The Acceptance of the Portrait.

As the apiause at the close of Mr. Carr's splendid address ceased, Col. Grimes presented Attorney General T. W. Bickett, representing the State, to accept the protrait. Mr. Bickett did so most happily, saying:

"While Mr. Carr was reading his admirable address it occurred to me that Priscilla was not only a very charming maiden, but also something of a philosopher, when she put to Alden the question: 'Why don't you speak for yourself, John?' It must be a source of pride to us all that the time has come when a North Carolina pen, and a North Carolina brush can preserve for all time the story and the features of one of the great soldiers and statesmen of Revolutionary times.

"North Carolina is happy in that in every crisis of the Nation's life her sons have risen to the necessities of the hour. Among the very foremost in her long roll of honor stands the name of William R. Davie—

"'Great in the council, glorious in the field.'

"His life and character constitute a distinct asset of the State, and must be forever associated with the epoch-making chapters of the Nation's history.

"The address of Mr. Carr is a permanent contribution to the historical literature of the State, and will keep before our eyes a man whom we cannot afford to forget.

"In presenting the portrait of General Davie to the State the Sons of the Revolution render to us and to posterity a very real service. 'And their works do follow them.'

"In proper time this portrait will be placed on the walls in the Governor's office or at the Executive Mansion."

Then the orchestra gave "The Star Spangled Banner," after which Bishop Cheshire pronounced the benediction, and as the audience stopped to examine the portrait the orchestra rendered as closing numbers "Dixie" and "Auld Lang Syne," this closing the presentation exercises.

GREAT INSTITUTION.

Plant of Southern Presbyterian College and Conservatory of Music.

(Red Springs Correspondence Fayetteville Observer.)

Fayetteville and Orange Presbyteries and all the friends of woman's education will be glad to know that this vigorous young college for women is rapidly nearing completion. Some idea of the size of the buildings may be obtained when we consider the fact that they contain a total of 273 rooms and cover a little over three acres of floor space. The main building alone contains 267 yards of halls. The buildings are heated by steam and lighted by electricity. Here on the second and third floors are 147 bed rooms, 24 bath rooms, four toilet rooms, the infirmary with its private bathrooms; also the art room and instruction rooms for domestic science and domestic arts. On the first floor, the dining room, 108x50 feet, serving room, kitchen and pantries, 14 recitation rooms, parlors, reading room and library, the college offices and gymansium. In a separate wing are the music rooms, 27 in number, and the auditorium seating 1,000 persons.

In the power house is the steam laundry, also the work shop for general repairs; two 60 horse power boilers, two steam pumps that supply the 15,000 gallon tank, two dynamos, one direct current, capable of lighting the college, and one alternating current that lights both the college and the town. The campus, which contains about 23 acres, is finely located and can be made very beautiful.

Basketball grounds, tennis courts, six in number, and other out-door amusements are provided. The officers and teachers number 35, and there are 314 students. We consider that a very good showing for an institution in her 15th year, especially when we consider that it began in 1896 with a total of 36 rooms, and at no time in its history has had large financial assistance.

AGRICULTURAL BULLETIN.

Preventive Treatment for Oat and Wheat Smut—Remedy.

Bulletin 212 of the North Carolina Agricultural Experiment Station by Dr. F. L. Stevens, which has just appeared from the press, gives full directions for preventing the various smuts of oats and wheat. These are due to little living parasitic plants which grow within the wheat and oat plants. They cause large loss, cutting down the yield of grain often as much as 20 per cent. or even 30 per cent., while the stinking smut of wheat does much greater damage by injuring the milling quality of the grain. The formalin treatment which is thoroughly effective and costs almost nothing, is described and recommended for oat smut. The same treatment is even more effective than the ordinary bluestone treatment for the stinking smut in wheat. The loose smut of wheat can be prevented by a modified hot water treatment coupled with separate growth of seed in a protected seed plat. Director C. B. Williams, West Raleigh, N. C., states that these diseases cause thousands upon thousands of dollars of loss every year to the oat and wheat crops of the State and that this bulletin was prepared especially to give farmers at this time the latest and most effective means of combating these diseases. He states that a copy of this bulletin may be secured by any resident of North Carolina free of cost upon application to him.

undertake without money and without price, the cure of the homeless child.

When Mr. and Mrs. Streeter, with their young charge, went to New York little less than a year ago, a chapter of wonder and romance began to unfold in the hitherto desolate life of the mountain child. There were long interludes of pain ,it is true, but in the Hospital for Deformities and Joint Diseases, where she was under Dr. Sayre's care, there were also love and interest, and wonderful picture books, and children who were beautiful for all that they suffered.

Everything was a continuous marvel and delight to the child.

"Who fotched this frost water?" she asked in her timid drawl and mountain dialect, when she tasted ice water for the first time, adding in fear: "Be it fitten ter drink?"

Days and months passed, and the wonderful cure progressed so surely and swiftly that even Dr. Sayre himself could scarcely believe the evidence of his senses. By skilled manipulations, the muscles, bones and finally, the limbs themselves, were gradually twisted into natural curves and positions. Through feverish days and nights the child's feet and legs were kept in tortuous plaster casts, to be removed only for new manipulations and to be put again into new and still more painful casts. The day came, however, at the end of the twelvemonth, when she was as straight as other children.

"Uncle" and "Auntie" Streeter again left their little charges in the Children's Home at Greensboro and journeyed to New York for Gertrude McIntosh. Anxious to see the child provided for, they have in the meantime found a home for her, as they have found for 400 other dependent North Carolina children who have come under their loving care.

The child, abandoned by her mother, inmate of a poor house, a home of charity, and wise in the knowledge of pain before her eighth birthday, will be adopted by a wealthy South Carolina banker and his wife.

"The kind gentleman my Auntie Streeter told me about has broughten me through," she confided to me timidly. "His name is Christ Jesus."

FOR THE LITTLE ONES.

Thanksgiving Day—Orphans' Day—What It Should Mean.

The work of the orphanages of North Carolina appeals most strongly to reason and to sympathy. These institutions are worthy of the heartiest support of our people and they have a large place in their interest and gifts and efforts.

At the Thanksgiving season minds and hearts turn especially toward our orphanages and many are the practical expressions of gratitude made to this cause by a people richly blessed.

These love-prompted gifts to carry on this blessed work with these little ones surely must be acceptable to God, the Father of the fatherless.

It seems that, here in North Carolina, Thansgkiving Day has been specially set apart as "Orphans' Day" and we rejoice that this is true. The contributions made at this season help very much indeed in the support of our various orphanages.

We trust that even larger offerings will be made at this Thanksgiving season than ever before to the end that these institutions may be the better able to perform their service. They need funds for maintenance, for improvement and for the extension of the work.

Not Sorry for Blunder.

RHEUMATISM

PURIFYING THE BLOOD THE ONLY PERMANENT CURE

No case of Rheumatism was ever cured except by a thorough purification of the blood; just as long as the blood remains charged with fermenting uric acid poison, the painful disease will continue. The pains and aches of Rheumatism are simply superficial effects of the impurities in the circulation, and sometimes may be temporarily relieved by the application of plasters, liniments, hot cloths, etc. But the person who trifles with this dangerous disease by depending on local treatment alone, is certain to pay for the mistake with constant suffering later on. S. S. S. cures Rheumatism in the only way it is possible to cure the disease. It goes down into the blood, and removes the uric acid from the circulation, so that the nerves, bones, muscles and joints are lubricated and fed with nourishing elements instead of being continually irritated and inflamed with the sharp, uratic impurity. When S. S. S. has cleansed and purified the blood, the pains and aches cease, all inflammation disappears, stiffened muscles are made pliant, and every troublesome symptom of Rheumatism is permanently corrected. GOVERNOR WILLSON (KY.)

"A new idea in American politics, aiming to promote uniform legislation on vital questions, to conserve state rights, to lessen centralization, to secure a fuller, freer voice of the people and to make a stronger nation."

By CHARLES N. LURIE.

IN the words quoted above is sounded the call to the American people to give heed to the coming meeting of the governors and the governors elect of the states at Frankfort, Ky., Nov. 29, and in Louisville, Nov. 30 to Dec. 3. Not only should the thinking American follow the reports of the deliberations of the meetings as brought to him by the press, but he should endeavor to grasp the significance of the conference and of the subsequent annual gatherings and to fix in his mind their new place in the scheme of American government.

A body without power save that of recommendation to the legislatures, yet the only practicable method of co-operation by the states of the Union in those matters which require concerted action—such is the house of governors. Its primary purposes are, first, the institution of personal association and contact of the governors; second, enabling them individually and their states to profit by one another's experiences in directing state affairs; third, advancement of the cause of uniform legislation, where such legislation is deemed desirable, by united state action where United States action has failed and must fail because of constitutional limitation of power.

There is also the combating of the idea of centralization, but it should be understood clearly that there is no suggestion of antagonism toward the federal government. The spheres of national and state action are separated by the constitution and must remain separated if the provisions of the constitution are to be observed. The father of the house of governors' plan, William George Jordan, who is the permanent secretary of the house, states this last named purpose of the conferences thus: "The states are called upon through the house of governors to give heed to the lapse of state rights and powers consciously or unconsciously abrogated."

Remedy Sought For Evils.

Rights and powers, duties and responsibilities belonging legally and morally to the states have been permitted to lapse through the neglect of the states themselves. It is to alter this state of affairs and to effect a cure of some of the evils from which we are suffering—evils which can be remedied only through the action of the state governments working in harmony—that the house of governors will be called upon to lend its collective wisdom.

The federal constitution was ratified by the thirteen original states and has been indorsed by the thirty-three which have since entered the Union. (Arizona and New Mexico are not yet full fledged states.) Each state is an independent commonwealth, with sovereign powers within its own boundaries. The powers conferred by the states on the federal government, which stands, therefore, toward the state governments in the relation of creature to creators, are those only which are explicitly and expressly conferred on it and are not reserved to the states themselves. They are seventeen in number, carefully enumerated and defined. Any action by the federal government outside of these restricted powers is extra legal and illegal and will not bear test before the United States supreme court, the interpreter and guardian of the constitution.

Power of the Governors.

As stated above, the power of the governors is that of recommendation solely, but that recommendation would have vastly more power if indorsed by the united action of the state executives. It is contended that only through co-operation by the states, functioning through the state legislatures and actuated by the recommendations of the governors, can concerted state action as deemed necessary by the wisdom of the governors be made effective. The need of agreement and uniform laws on certain important matters, such as divorce, extradition of fugitives from justice, life insurance and automobile regulations, is conceded.

Cannot the federal government attend to those matters and apply the proper remedies by means of federal legislation? The reply is simply that the central power may not legislate on such matters without exceeding its rights as defined by the constitution. Constitutional amendment may be suggested, but the process of changing the fundamental law of the nation cannot be undertaken to meet such cases and need not be undertaken when so simple a plan as concerted state action to be procured through the action of the house of governors is available.

Granted, therefore, that concerted state action is desirable, how shall it be obtained? There is no provision in the constitution for periodical meetings of representatives of the states. It may be urged that the senators represent the states. They do so only in relation to the federal legislation enacted in pursuance of the objects expressly enumerated in the national pact. Taken collectively, the senators are only a second chamber for the consideration of proposed laws. With the house of governors in active, continuous operation we shall have a perfect bicameral or two chamber system, congress filling the need of national legislation and the house of governors representing the relations of the states to one another.

Simplicity of the Idea.

Given annual meetings of the governors, what better engine of intercommunication and interchange of ideas can be devised? These broad minded men will meet and will discuss in harmony the needs of their states. They will talk over what has been done and is being done to solve the problems common to all of the states, and they will reach bases of agreement.

It should be understood that uniformity of laws is not the only purpose of these governors' meetings, but that uniformity of desire to enact the best laws for each individual state is a desired end. Uniformity of laws is neither desirable nor desired in some instances. It is as a clearing house of ideas on state government and as a medium of friendly association of the state executives that the house of governors finds its highest expression.

Foremost in the minds of the governors at the coming meeting will be no doubt the question of the conservation of natural resources, now much discussed, and it probably will be one of the subjects of formal debate. It is asserted by the advocates of state conservation that the subject of conservation must be considered from two viewpoints, one presenting the duty and right of the federal government to conserve the resources of its own property, the other showing a similar duty and right of the states in regard to their natural wealth and that of their citizens. The vital interest of the states in this question is well evidenced by the fact that four-fifths of the standing timber of the country is owned by private persons or corporations, subject to the jurisdiction of the states. With this four-fifths the federal government can have no direct relationship. The same condition exists between the states and the owners of the water rights, the minerals, etc.

The problem of the conservation of the greatest part of the country's resources is solvable by the states and by the states only, say the men who see in the house of governors a means of salvation for the idea of a federal union, challenged, they assert, by the tendency of a centralized federal government to enter upon the consideration of matters with which it has no proper concern.

The first business of the house of governors at the coming meeting will be that of organization. The committee of arrangements consists of Governor Willson of Kentucky, the host of his fellow executives; Governor Ansel of South Carolina and Governor Hadley of Missouri. Among the governors who will deliver addresses before the conference are Burke of North Dakota and Norris of Montana. A budget will be adopted, and the governors will consult on the matter of asking the states to appropriate the money needed to carry on the permanent organization of the house. It will be assessed in proportion to the states' population. The expenses will be small in comparison to the good to be gained. Provision will be made for a permanent office, probably in New York. The first meeting of the house of governors was held in Washington in January, 1910, but probably never again will there be a meeting in the national capital. It is proposed to hold the meetings in the state capitals, in each of them in turn.

William George Jordan is the man who conceived this new idea in the American governmental system. He made it public in a pamphlet issued in 1907, and it met with instant favor. Its simplicity and utility appealed to the publicists, and they gave to it their enthusiastic indorsement. Many of them have recorded their opinions that it supplied an essential, heretofore missing part in the mechanism of our government inadvertently omitted by the fathers. The man to whom credit must be awarded for remedying the defect is a native and a resident of New York city and an editor and author of high standing. He has been connected with some of the country's best known periodicals and has written several books.

HOSPITAL SHIP TO BE GOOD SAMARITAN OF THE GLOUCESTER FISHERMAN

A GOOD SAMARITAN of the seas is what Massachusetts has planned to send out for the succor of its sons who meet with disaster on the waters of the great deep. A floating hospital well equipped to meet the emergencies of medical and surgical work among the fishermen has been recommended by Dr. L. L. Williams, surgeon in charge of the marine hospital in Chelsea. It is estimated that the expenditure of $20,000 for a schooner and supplies and an annual appropriation of $10,000 or $12,000 will cover the cost of sending relief to these men, who add much to the wealth of the Bay State and are worthy of this provision for their health and safety.

The idea is to have the work of the hospital ship confined strictly to emergencies. Besides the crew needed to navigate the vessel, her complement is to include a physician, necessarily skilled in surgical work, and two nurses. The range proposed for her covers many leagues of water, from the nearest edge of the Georges bank, about 120 miles from Boston, to the eastern edge of these banks, about 300 miles away.

According to the latest available figures, the crews of the Massachusetts fishing fleets number more than 6,000 men, and the average number out on the banks engaged in the work of fishing ranges from 1,500 to 2,000. These men bring in annually fish worth several millions of dollars. Their ports are Boston, Gloucester, Salem, Provincetown and other coast towns, but the majority of them call Gloucester their home.

For four centuries, without a break, the men of the Atlantic coasts of Europe and America have taken fish from the waters off the coast of Newfoundland and adjacent territories. No other industry in America can boast of so long an ancestry. During all these centuries men have reaped the harvest of the seas, paying for it in many cases with their lives and limbs. Not a year in all those 400 has passed without adding its quota to the ever lengthening list of the dead and maimed. The perils of the sea are many in winter, when much of the fishing is done.

UPPER PICTURE.—CLEANING FISH ON A GLOUCESTER WHARF.
LOWER PICTURE.—SCENE ON A FISHING SCHOONER.

Of all the perils of the fishing banks that of collision with a liner is the one most feared. "Collision" is hardly the word, since the shock so frequently fatal to the schooner, invariably mortal to the dory or smaller boat, is hardly felt by the leviathan of the seas. The preface to the disaster comes with the settling down of the fog which hides all things, even the sea, from the lookout on the steamer's bow and from the man in the dory. Then come the high, sharp steel prow of the liner looming out of the murk, the rending and crashing of timbers and the immersion in the icy water, followed in too many cases by crushing against the side of the big vessel. Such cases generally mean death without hope of rescue.

Other accidents of the sea, such as falls on the schooners, severe injuries due to cutting with the fish knives which play so large a part in the business, amputations of toes or fingers or greater members made necessary by freezing, shocks due to long immersion, etc., fall within the province of the hospital ship. The captains of the fishing schooners are amateur physicians and surgeons in many cases and carry with them remedies for the simple ills which might befall their men. But they are helpless in severe cases, and the hospital ship is to supply this need.

"Lines are graven early on the faces of the women of Gloucester," says a magazine writer. "The girl who marries a fisherman in her early twenties takes more than even chances of being a widow in her thirties. Memorial day in Gloucester is unique in its celebration of the terrible tax levied upon human life by a human industry. On that midwinter day children cast flowers upon the freezing waters of Gloucester harbor—one child to each flower, one flower for each victim of the sea during the preceding year. After the exercises in the harbor there is a memorial service at the city hall, with addresses, reading the names of the dead and prayers.

"In the winter the fisherman must fight to a finish his battle with the elements, for on the banks there is no harbor. He must brave storms which sweep his decks with waves so high that even a seaman dares not estimate them and which roll his craft until the coals burning in the galley are spilled upon its roof and the common name of all his stores of food is hash. He struggles with the wheel in weather that exhausts him in a fifteen minute shift and in the bitterest cold beats ice from rigging and decks, knowing that neglect means more flowers in the harbor on Memorial day. He rides out winter gales at the end of half a mile of cable, which it often takes a full day to hoist aboard."

WINTER MAKES ACUTE THE QUESTION OF THE CITY BEGGAR

WHAT shall we folks of the big cities do with our beggars? Or, failing a satisfactory answer to this question, what shall we permit our beggars to do to us? We are called upon to reply to one or the other of these queries, especially at this season of the year, when mendicancy is on the increase in the big centers of population.

A glance at the calendar supplies the reason. Thanksgiving heralds the approach, or perhaps emphasizes the arrival, of the winter, and it also ushers in the ante-holiday season, when the thoughts of all turn to Christmas shopping and the streets begin to be filled with buyers. In the presence of throngs in the city streets lies the earnest of success for the beggar's efforts.

The first breath of approaching winter in the fields and roads of the rural sections turns the thoughts of the homeless wanderer to the city. It is cold work tramping, and the thought of the heated, if squalid, cheap city lodging house is grateful to the recollection. And, too, the city folk are "easy." They will part with their hard earned money without hesitation at the sight of distress, real or simulated.

Herein lies the very crux of the mendicancy problem, which is almost as old as the world itself and still ever new in its recurring phases. Shall we—"we" are the persons of moderate circumstances, to whom a dollar or its fraction represents real work and effort—yield to our praiseworthy charitable instincts and give without hesitation to the beggar who is obviously incapacitated by disease or deformity from earning his livelihood, or shall we pry and question and investigate and probe while the sufferer hungers and thirsts? Human charity sends the hand unhesitatingly to the pocket or the purse. Human wisdom bids us hesitate lest in giving "charity" we work directly a real injustice to the recipient and an indirect injury to the public.

The latter viewpoint is that of organized charity, the conclusion of wise, thoughtful men and women who look from the granting of immediate relief to the permanent uplifting of the mendicant. It is proved by investigation, say these sociologists, that money given on the street does little real good. It aids directly in the permanent pauperization of the beggar. It supplies him with the means of indulging vicious propensities, and it works an injury to the public by aiding in the dissemination of the diseases with which these street solicitors of aid are frequently afflicted. Very seldom, indeed, does the mendicant retire on his "earnings." Once a beggar, always a beggar, seems to be the rule.

To aid in remedying this condition, through which the charitable instincts of the public are made the instrument of perpetuating an undesirable state of affairs, the National Association For the Prevention of Mendicancy and Charitable Imposture has been established, with headquarters in New York and with James Forbes as its permanent secretary and director.

The pictures printed herewith show what the beggar of a large city is and what he may become if he evinces an interest in the improvement of his own condition. One of the pictures is that of a New York beggar gnawing at a crust of bread picked up in the street in the sight of passersby in order to excite pity and stimulate the giving of alms. The other is that of a man deprived of one of his legs in a railroad accident and enabled through organized charity to set up in business for himself selling newspapers.

AUTOMOBILE ASSOCIATION.

Annual Meeting in New York Last of November.—The Work.

New York, Nov. 19.—When the anual meeting of the American Automobile Association convenes at the Hotel Belmont in New York City on November 30 and December 1. the report of the membership committee will show a total closely approaching 34,000. Several additional State associations are practically assured, the most recent applicant being the Idaho State Automobile Association, which will include clubs in Boise, Twin Falls, Idaho Falls and Montpelier. Robert S. Spangler is the one who has work so successfully.

New Hampshire will be another newcomer to the National list, and President L. R. Speare, who is a Summer resident of that State, has practically interested himself in the work there.

The largest club in Tennessee, the Memphis Automobile Club, has notified the A. A. A. Board of Directors that its application will be in for action at the annual meeting, and the clubs at Nashville and Knoxville have given assurances of participating in the formation of a State association.

Georgia now has available the three clubs necessary to start a State body, two of which, the Savannah Automobile Club and the Floyd County Automobile Association of Rome, are already unfederated members of the A. A. A.

Leonard Tufts, the well-known good roads advocate. is acting in North Carolina to form a State association there, and South Carolina is another prospective, with the clubs in Columbia and Charleston particularly active. The South, more than any other section of the country, appreciates the value of good roads, for the tourists follow in their wake, and the fact that the Fourth National Good Roads Convention is likely to take place in Atlanta, further accentuates the awakening of the South to the value of highway improvement.

Preliminary to the recent election, the Pennsylvania Motor Federation, through its clubs and affiliated good roads organization in that State, communicated with the candidates of all parties in regard to highway measures to be introduced at the coming session of the Pennsylvania legislature. The majority of replies received indicate a favorable attitude towards highway legislation. In other parts of the country the A. A. A. State associations and clubs figure prominently in the good roads results sought, and the whole trend of National sentiment shows that the owners of motor-driven vehicles must carry on a large part of the work in order to secure satisfactory good roads laws.

Coincident with the improvement of roads, is their greater use, and A. A. A. members are keen for new territory and new scenes. Thus the Touring Bureau at National headquarters has a formidable task on hand to keep track of roads building in the various States. Even the inveterate traveler who hies himself to Europe. is beginning to appreciate that his own country is becoming a better touring ground month by month.

Reference might be made to the fact that the A. A. A. is the only American member of the International League of Touring Associations, which comprises all the important European organizations interested particularly in the encouragement of touring.

CRADDOCK-TERRY COMPANY.

Big Deal Which Means Much to the Entire South.

An agreement has been entered into, whereby Craddock-Terry Company will acquire a controlling interest in the Geo. D. Witt Shoe Company, January 1st.

This deal is in no sense "a combination in restraint of trade," but is a very important move looking to the further development of the shoe industry in Lynchburg.

The Craddock-Terry Company and the Geo. D. Witt Shoe Company have made wonderful progress in shoe manufacturing, but in order to get the best results, in order to produce the best shoes at the lowest prices, shoes of each grade and kind should be manufactured in a separate factory, and by consolidating the factories of both companies under practically one management, making in each factory the grade and kind of shoes which can be produced to the best advantage, it will enable both companies to make a great improvement in the quality, and a material saving in the cost of the shoes sold by both Craddock-Terry Company and by the Geo. D. Witt Shoe Company, and will naturally increase the rapidly growing demand for Lynchburg-made shoes.

Craddock-Terry Company have long enjoyed the reputation of being the largest manufacturers of shoes in South, but this deal puts them in a class with the largest manufacturers in their line in the world and it makes Lynchburg a big factor in the world's commerce so far as shoes are concerned.

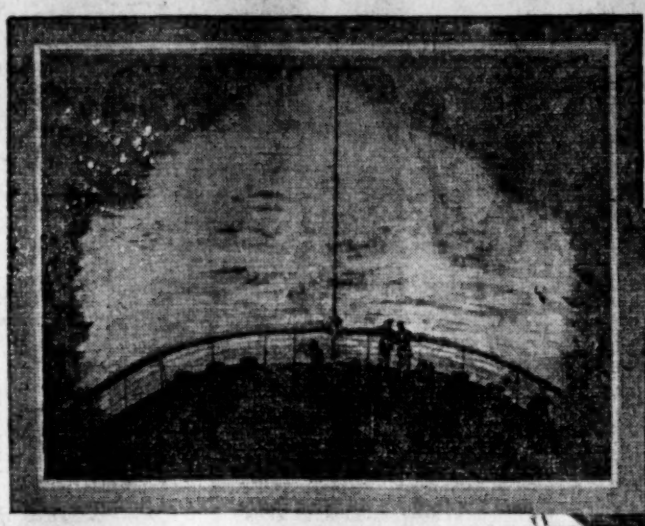
While Geo. D. Witt retires from the active management of the business of which he is now president, he will leave his money in this business in the shape of preferred stock, and the Geo. D. Witt Shoe Company will continue as heretofore, a corporation separate and distinct from Craddock-Terry Company, retaining most of the men who are now at the head of the various departments and practically all of the traveling men, under the general supervision of T. M. Terry, as president.

Under this new deal, all of the shoe factories of Lynchburg (except one) will be under practically the same management, which means that more shoes will be manufactured in Lynchburg next year than ever before; in fact, Craddock-Terry Company alone will manufacture more shoes than all of their Southern competitors combined, and Lynchburg will stand in a class by herself, as "The Shoe Market of the South," and one of the greatest shoe markets of the world.

This announcement will be of great interest to the shoe trade all over the United States, as both of these progressive manufacturers enjoyed a patronage in almost every State in the Union, having enlarged the territory in which they operate year by year, until now Lynchburg made shoes find a ready market in the largest cities of the South, East, North and West.

If Ben Franklin Should Come Back Today

With his abiding faith in the future, his trite answer to the man who scoffed at Montgolfier's experiments in ballooning, in the light of the great electrical achievements of the last century, would seem to him like the fulfilment of a prophecy.



"The Highway of the Deep"—Wake of Lusitania Making 27 Miles an Hour.

ONE day a man asked Benjamin Franklin of what use to humanity were certain experiments in ballooning then being made by Montgolfier. Franklin looked at him curiously and said: "Of what use is a new-born babe?"

Franklin, who was far ahead of his time, was a philosopher and knew that the effort of Montgolfier to demonstrate the practicability of aerial navigation, fatuous as it may have seemed to the average mind in those days, was but the forerunner of one of the most useful and stirring achievements of man.

Like his own crude experiments in the field of electricity, the value of which he modestly underestimated, he recognized there was a time coming in the evolution of man when he would master its secret and dominate the air as he had the earth and all on it.

What Montgolfier deemed feasable is now an established fact, though it may have been fortunate for him that the task of demonstrating it was deferred to a less superstitious age than that in which he moved. Had he accomplished what he set out to achieve it is probable that he would have been condemned for witchcraft or some equally reprehensible form of blasphemy.

Franklin's discovery of the analogy between lightning and electricity by means of his famous kite experiment, it will be remembered, caused him to be exorcised and scored as a defiler of the Great Jehovah from many pulpits throughout the colonies.

There have been a good many new-born babes since "Poor Richard" gave his blunt answer to the man who scoffed and sought to make little of Montgolfier and his experiment. To each of them has been given the opportunity to see many wonderful achievements wrought in the industries, arts and sciences that would have gladdened the heart of a Franklin who left the world richer by his presence in it than he found it.

Edison Tooting a Message Across the River by Locomotive Whistle.

"Of What Use to the World Is Such Nonsense?" asked a Man of Ben Franklin.
"Of What Use Is a New-Born Babe?" Replied "Poor Richard" Contemptuously.

P. B. Delany Watching His 2,000-Words a Minute Telegraph Transmitter.

Professor Samuel F. B. Morse, who, like Robert Fulton, the inventor of the first steam-propelled boat of practical value, was a painter by profession, got his inspiration of the system he later put into successful operation between Baltimore and Washington while returning to this country from France on the packet ship Sully.

This invention gave an impetus to electrical research which is responsible for some of the most wonderful inventions of all time.

To it the world is indebted for the advent into the electrical field of Thomas A. Edison, Alexander Graham Bell, Patrick B. Delany, William Marconi and other wizards who have since startled the world with their discoveries.

Edison was a telegraph operator in his early days, as was Delany. Bell was a teacher. An interesting story is related of Edison's employment of a locomotive for sending a message across the St. Claire river one day when an ice jam broke the cable between Sarnia on the Canadian side and Port Huron, Mich., where Edison was employed as an operator. Edison was sent to ascertain the cause of the trouble. The river, which was a mile and a half wide, being impassable, Edison jumped on the locomotive on the American side and used its whistle to toot out a message in the dots and dashes of the Morse code. He repeated "Hello, Sarnia. Do you get me?" with the whistle four or five times before the Canadian operator recognized the Morse figures of speech and realized what he was doing. The toots were then made out and the Canadian operator signalled that he understood him. For ten minutes Edison communicated back and forth in this odd way and soon thereafter communication was re-established. This is one of the most novel uses of the locomotive ever known and the incident added to the accumulating fame of Edison, who shortly afterwards produced the duplex and inventions to repeat and relay messages, which doubled the uses of the telegraph.

Thirty-one years intervened between the introduction of the telegraph and the advent of the telephone, of which there are now more than 5,000,000 in use in the United States. Fifteen years later came Delany's multiplex by which six messages were transmitted at the same time over a telegraph wire, which added immensely to the efficiency of the Morse system. This was in turn followed by the same inventor's anti-page relay and anti-induction inventions which still further augmented the uses of the Morse telegraph. Then came Delany's Telepost automatic telegraph system, the crowning achievement of forty years' study, by which from 2,000 to 5,000 words a minute are transmitted over either a telegraph or telephone wire. In respect to speed this achievement represents so distinct and far reaching an advance over its predecessors that scientific men are of the opinion that it will dominate the telegraph field of the world in a few years. Edison might have added this invention to the two hundred or more now to his credit had he stuck to its solution. He and Delany started out to solve the problem together in 1871 over an experimental line between Washington and New York, but the wizard gave it up after three years of application to its consideration. Delany persevered alone, and eventually won out, after endless disappointments and heartburnings such as usually attend the first efforts of inventors.

Now that the principle of aerial propulsion seems at last to have been discovered and the dawn of a new era of locomotion is about to be ushered in, it does not require much of an imagination to foresee the period when a trans-Atlantic or trans-Pacific journey will be made by airship instead of by the great marine greyhounds of the present day. When this day comes it is probable that the trip between New York and London will be made in 36 hours. From San Francisco to Hong Kong or Yokohama will take less than five days and Australia a little more than a week.

With all these wonders to our credit still may we seriously ask, looking forward to the end of the century upon which we have entered so auspiciously: "Of what use is a new-born babe?"

"Despite all that has been accomplished since Franklin spoke, we are still new-born babes to whom the world is a constantly unfolding panorama of wonders. Man is evoluting so rapidly and daily wresting from nature so many of its treasured secrets that the most fanciful and extravagant pictures of the future we can conjure in our imagination will probably fall far short of the realization when the history of the world's accomplishments in the line of scientific achievement is written one hundred years hence.

"The very fact," said Thomas A. Edison, some time ago, "that this last century has accomplished so much in the way of invention makes it more than probable that the next century will do far greater things. We ought to be ashamed of ourselves if we are content to fold our hands and say that the telegraph, telephone, steam engine, dynamo and camera having been invented, the field has been exhausted. These inventions are so many tools with which we ought to accomplish far greater wonders. Unless the coming generations are particularly lazy the world ought to possess in 1993 a dozen new marvels of transcendent usefulness to humanity."

In his interesting book, "Random Reminiscences of Men and Events," John D. Rockefeller says of those who, like Montgolfier's critic, seek to ridicule the world's pioneers in unbeaten paths:

"A great number of scientific men every year give up everything to arrive at some helpful contribution to the sum of human knowledge, and I have sometimes thought that good people who lightly and freely criticize their actions scarcely realize just what such criticism means. It is one thing to stand on the comfortable ground of placid inaction and put forth words of cynical wisdom and another to plunge into the work itself and through strenuous experience earn the right to express strong conclusions.

"For my own part I have stood so much as a placid onlooker that I have not had the hardihood even to suggest how people so much more experienced and wise in those things than I should work out the details of those plans with which I have had the honor to be associated."

Looking backward to the time when our ancestors ate raw food, lived in caves hewn out of the mountain sides and covered their nakedness with the skins of wild animals, it is interesting to note the successive steps by which man has bridged space, multiplied his opportunities for usefulness and lengthened the life of a day between sunrise and sunset. Of all the industrial romances none is so stirring in achievement as the romance of communication.

Each day the world, once content to live in feudal isolation, is being drawn closer together through the fecundity of inventive genius with its endless devices for promoting and making more intimate the intercourse between widely separated peoples of the earth. With the improvement of means of communication is coming a better understanding between nations. Prejudices due to lack of knowledge and lack of appreciation are gradually disappearing. Everywhere the spirit of national caste, once hypersensitive to every discordant jar, is giving way to a feeling of interdependence and sympathy.

It took the Mayflower two months to cross the Atlantic on its memorable journey to Cape Cod in the autumn of 1620. The descendants of its passengers now make the voyage in little more than four days. In the sixty-four days consumed by the Pilgrims in threading their way across seas, it is now possible to circumnavigate the globe.

When we read of Xerxes consuming one month in moving his army of one million men and their servants across the Hellespont by the primitive methods then prevailing, the picture of the million and a half men and women who daily cross and recross the Brooklyn bridges on their way to business on Manhattan island, New York city, looms impressively before us and makes one feel how great has been the progress of the world since that memorable historical episode.

To take the oath as first president of the United States, Washington made the trip from his home at Mt. Vernon on the Potomac to New York in a stage. It took him weeks to complete the journey which is now made by express trains in seven hours. Singular as it may seem today it is interesting to observe that the fixing of March 4th as the date of the presidential inauguration by the founders of the constitution was deemed necessary in order that a candidate might have the opportunity to reach Washington within a reasonable time after learning of his election. It is recorded that Andrew Jackson rode from the Hermitage to the White House to assume the duties of the Nation's chief executive on his favorite horse.

With every other means of communication with the outside world cut off, its population reduced to the necessity of eating cats and dogs to save themselves from starving to death, the citizens of Paris, during the siege of that city by the triumphant German and Prussian forces in 1871 used carrier pigeons to convey appeals for food from the beleaguered capital to the outlying provinces of France.

Thanks to the telephone and telegraph, it is no longer possible to mobilize a hostile army or a hostile fleet for a sudden attack upon an unprepared foe without the whole world being apprised of the fact within a few minutes. Feats such as have given enduring fame to Alexander, Napoleon and others of their kind are not now practical.

Like everything else in this world communication has been a matter of evolution. It is a long stretch back to the days of Ulysses, the crafty Greek general, who conceived the plan for the destruction of Troy. In one of his pilgrimages abroad Ulysses, Homer tells us in the Odyssey, was gone twelve years and vainly strove to get word of his whereabouts to Penelope, his wife, and Telemachus, his son.

The Ishmaelites traveling from Gilead into Judea to buy Joseph from his brothers for the 20 pieces of silver recorded in Scripture employed the slow-going camel to carry them to their destination, just as they still do today in parts of Egypt. These were times when days and months elapsed before important news reached distant points on either land or sea. The Athenian General Miltiades, anxious to have the news reach Athens of the defeat of the Persian army by the Hellenic host on the plains of Marathon, dispatched one of his soldiers afoot with the tidings. Reaching the Acropolis the athlete, who ran the entire distance of 26 miles, dropped dead from exhaustion.

That was yesterday. How different today! Ten minutes after Schley smashed Cervera's fleet off the harbor of Santiago on the morning of July 3rd, 1898, the news of the destruction of the Spanish Armada was known in Washington, 1,500 miles away!

When the ancients desired to signal intelligence from one army corps to another they reflected the rays of the sun from their shining shields after the fashion of the small boy and the looking glass. They had a code of signals which were understood throughout the army and communicated messages between each other with much skill. The heliograph now employed by modern armies is a scientific amplification of this method of signalling.

Polybius in his description of the methods of signalling largely used by the people of the early ages for the purposes of conveying messages to each other, makes mention of the employment of flags by Eneas Tacitus, 300 B.C. and himself.

In the list of instructions issued by Don Martin de Padilla under date of 1599 reference is made of the use of guns for signalling by day and lights and fire by night. When there were no more efficient means of communication available these primitive methods admirably served the purpose for which they were designed.

With the introduction of the square-rigged ship under James II of England, a new method of signalling by means of the lowering and raising of the sails of ships was adopted. This, with the addition of rockets and varied colored lights on commanding hills were used up to the advent of electricity.

How wisely Franklin spoke when he asked "of what use is a new-born babe" has been emphasized anew many times since his death. While the world was far advanced over what it was in the centuries preceding his time it yet was but an infant in swaddling clothes so far as many things were concerned which in the light of present day achievement are regarded as commonplace.

Electricity as applied to communication, which came after the death of Franklin in 1790, revolutionized the world. For more than a hundred years prior to that time electricity was regarded as a plaything to amuse scientists and awe the unsophisticated. Franklin's identification of lightning as electricity, which resulted in the invention of the lightning rod, was of no use to the world, he thought, save to enable man to protect his life and his property. He had no idea of ever utilizing electricity as a force for carrying on the work of the world. It was not until Alexander Volta in 1799 discovered a battery for the storage of electricity that it assumed a practical potential value.

AMUSEMENTS

Academy. Bijou. Joyland. Palace.

This week the Academy of Music will offer two fine attractions. They will be a widely different nature, but each will represent the very best in its line. Tomorow night comes Henry W. Savage's sensational play, "Madame X", which has been proclaimed everywhere to be the "greatest play in the world".

Thursday a special holiday offering will be made in John W. Vogel's Minstrels. It will make a jolly and superb Thanksgiving Day attraction and two performances will be given, matinee and night. The matinee prices will go but to 75 cents, while at night the highest price will be $1. Seats will go on sale at Plummer's Wednesday morning.

JOHN W. VOGEL

"The Greatest Play in the World."

The story of "Madame X" the great drama of mother-love by Alexandre Bisson, which Henry W. Savage will offer at the Academy tomorrow night, with a splendid company of 60 persons, is exceedingly simple.

A young woman of weak, rather than evil character, is led from her husband by an unscrupulous man. She deserts her boy of two years also. Later she awakens to the enormity of her act, and in true contrition, begs forgiveness. But her husband, misunderstanding her motives, drives her from the door. A little afterward he is made to understand that he was in the first instance greatly at fault, and he determines to pardon his wife and bring her back.

This is shown in the prologue, and then the action shifts to the drama proper— twenty years later. The woman, in blank despair, has drifted through the very gutters of the world. Her husband has never succeeded in finding her and she, of course, knows nothing of his change of heart toward her. In the endeavor to forget her distress and disgrace, she has taken to not merely drink, but to ether-taking as well. Her vices have wrecked her body almost to the last extremity, while they have also benumbed her moral sense. There remains only the one redeeming element in her soul—her love for the boy whom she has not seen for a score of years.

In this condition Madame X (as she becomes known) returns to France. She hopes that she may get one glimpse of the son before the death comes that she knows is so near. But three rascals with whom she comes in contact discover something of her history and seek to make blackmailing capital out of it. When she finds this out she is horror-stricken at the thought that her boy's happiness may be killed forever by a knowledge of the infamy to which his mother has come. She cannot prevent the betrayal of the truth to her son in any other way, so she kills the man chiefly responsible.

She is arrested and brought to trial. In order to make sure that her boy shall never know of her evil end, she maintains a most rigid silence. She will not tell her name, nor anything about herself; she will not make the slightest effort to defend herself from the dread penalty of her act.

Meanwhile, as the spectator is shown, the son, Raymond, has grown to man's estate and is about to begin his career as an attorney at the bar. His father, now gray with years and sorrow, is a man of consequence, and secures for Raymon—as the boy's first case—the assignment as counsel for the defense in a murder trial that is about to be held. The accused person is unable to care for herself and, in accordance with legal custom, is provided by the court with an attorney.

Then comes the great climax of the drama—the trial. As may be guessed, the son has, all unwittingly, been appointed to defend his own mother.

Madame X does not recognize the boy, nor has he the least suspicion as to her identity. He has always supposed that his mother is dead. But the boy feels a strange, inexplicable sympathy for the poor, pathetic creature in the prisoner's dock, and he makes a masterly appeal for her. So powerfully does he picture the despair and distress of his client; so skillfully does he draw from little incidents that have been brought out, the real reason why the killing was done that the sympathetic jury acquits. In the meantime the mother has learned by merest accident who it is that stands there so valiantly fighting with all the ardor of his young heart her battle. One long, terrible cry of anguish escapes her as she learns the truth—then she relapses into the deathly lethargy that has all along marked her course. She knows that she is fast approaching the great gulf and her one hope is that she may reach it before her son discovers who she is.

In the last few moments of the play there comes the discovery by Raymond of all that has happened, his brief reunion with his mother—a moment in which all the sorrows of twenty years roll away from the poor creature—and then the finale. This is the most pathetic scene of all—and yet one of the most beautiful the stage has ever known.

Big Thanksgiving Attraction.

One of the many features to be presented by John W. Vogel's Big Minstrels, which will appear at the Academy matinee and night, Thanksgiving Day, is a beautiful and up-to-date dancing number entitled "The Great Event." The idea was conceived by Manager Vogel and arranged by Barney Fagin, the world's master producer of intricate dances and terpsichorean movements. The scene is laid at the famous Sheepshead Bay race course, and the prancing thoroughbreds are at the post awaiting the signal for the start, they get the word "They're off," hoof-beats are heard in the distance and immediately after the finish the jockeys appear neatly attired in the regular colors, representing the world's famous owners and stake winners.

William Rowe, the famous and renowned clog dancer, has been engaged to rehearse and produce the act in the absence of Mr. Fagin whose foreign engagements prevent his doing so.

BRUNSWICK COUNTY NEWS.

Items of Interest From This Week's Southport News.

The following items of interest to readers of the Star are taken from this week's issue of the Southport News:

"Southport is improving as a fish market. Each year shows gains in the volume of business done and in the variety shipped from here. The firm of T. H. Dosher & Co., have done a good business here this season, which has brought considerable money into the community. One day last week this firm shipped over 5,300 pounds of trout. Capt Church got into a school of jimmies last week and turned over to the firm about 5,000 pounds of that variety, which was handled. Deep sea fishing is on the increase here, which industry bids fair to become an important one in the locality. Encouragement should be given to the enterprise of packing and shipping, for a success in that the development of a larger market here.

As prsident of the Chamber of Commerce, Mr. . B. Stevens has appointed the following members as delegates to the drainage convention, viz: W. H. Pyke, M. C. Guthrie, R. C. Cool, A. J. Robbins, T. M. Thompson and C. Ed. Taylor.

"On the next Thursday morning at 10 o'clock at Bolivia public school Fort Johnson Council, Jr. O. U. A. Mechanics, will present a Bible and Flag to that School, to which event all Juniors in the county are invited. Appropriate exercises will be had, together with a programme arranged by the teacher, while the address will be delivered by Hon. C. Ed. Taylor.

"The Fourth Quarterly Conference for the Methodist Church was held on Monday morning. Rev. W. L. Cuninggim, president no(heMnenon Cuninggim, presiding elder, conducted the Conference. He also preached on Sunday at both services. This is the last appointment for Mr. Cuninggim here, as he will be sent to another work in the Conference at the forthcoming session at Elizabeth City. He has performed four years of useful service in this district, and will leave for other fields under the rules of his church. It is no doubt with much regret that the Wilmington district gives up this faithful presiding elder.

The Wilmington Sanitarium.

A private enterprise, in the strictest acceptance of the term, yet withal a public institution in the larger sense of its usefulness in the community, there will be opened tomorrow at northeast corner of Front and Castle streets. The Wilmington Sanitarium, recently founded by Dr Chas. T. Harper, of this city, and housed and equipped in a very handsome building which has recently given place to the for er rather dilapidated structures on that prominent, rather secluded, corner of two of Wilmington's popular thoroughfares.

Above is presented a cut of the new sanitarium from a photograph taken as the building was being completed. It is a very handsome structure, two stories in height, of ornamental brick, and was built according to ideas of Dr. Harper himself for a firstclass sanitarium, the plans having been by Architect Jos. F. Leitner and the contractor having been Mr. J. D. Brantley. The plant represents an investment of something like $15,000 fully equipped and Dr. Harper is due the credit for having established here an up-to-date sanitarium the ---e of making a specialty of genito-urinary, kidney and rectal diseases, has offices, laboratory and operating rooms to the right of the stair landing, while there are seperate apartments in the sanitarium to give hot air, medicated vapor, Turkish, needle, showed baths and nanheim, special apparatus having been installed for these purposes in connection with the institution. Call bells are installed in every room and Dr. Harper has been exceedingly fortunate in securing as superintendent, Mrs. Eliza McDuffie, for so long connected with the City Hospital and the James Walker Memorial Hospital. In addition to her duties as superintendent, Mrs. McDuffie is also prepared to do massage work with special attention to lady patrons, who are guaranteed absolute privacy and polite and courteous treatment.

Dr. Harper has installed for his own researc- and for use in connection with the sanitarium a large amount of apparatus for the general practice, a dark-field illum nator being one of the devices recently installed. Modern appliances and the most scientific instruments have been purchased which have proved so highly successful and of such great benefit in other towns and cities of far less importance and population than Wilmington.

The institution is handsomely finished on the interior and is splendidly equipped for the treatment of all medical and surgical diseases, The wards and various rooms are furnished with white enamel beds and cots and everything in this particular has been planned with a view to the most perfect sanitarium. Everything is pure white and in none of the wards are there sewerage connections which would give the least possibility of infection from that source. Many of the rooms are large, airy and comfortable, being well heated and lighted with both gas and electricity. As before stated the institution will be open for the reception of patients tomorrow morning and physicians not only of the city but of the surronding country are invited to make use of the sanitarium. The rates are from $12.50 per week up, this including nursing, board and all ordinary medicines. The capacity of the sanitarium is 15 beds nine of which have already been installed with others on the way. There are 13 rooms all told and each is well equipped and provided with everything necessary to the patient or convalescent. The sanitarium proper is reached by a broad stairway leading from Front street and everything is most conveniently arrainged. Dr. Chas. T. Harper, who recently took post-graduate work in the North and is now so that no hospital is more completely equipped in this respect.

Mr. H. A. Thompson, representing the Terre Haute Inhalatorium Co., is expected to arrive this week for the purpose of installing one of the machines annuactured by his house, said to be especially valuable in the treatment of asthmatic, tubercular and rheumatic diseases and the various disorders of the respiratory organs, also skin and blood diseases under competent medical advice.

A representative of this paper called at the office of Dr. Harper a few days ago and was delighted with the evidences of the best in equipment and the very sanitary appearance of everything in connection with the institution, which bids fair to be very popular and useful in this city.

It is impossible for a layman to speak of and describe many things in connection with the sanitarium that would appeal to the profession and his patient. The place is most attractive and home-like in appearance and in general environment; as one visitor casually remarked, upon inspecting the premises, "it would be a pleasure to get sick and be here." On the west side of the building, second floor, is a well protected portico from which patients may find sufficent interest in the street below not to be annoyed by the usual traffic on a busy city thoroughfare. The public and the profession generally, both in and out of the city, are cordially invited by Dr. Harper to call and inspect the sanatarium.

THE DRAINAGE CONVENTION.

Importance of Work Emphasized by Mr. B. F. Keith.

Wilmington, N. C., Nov. 19, 1910.

The Editor of the Star:—Will you kindly allow me permission through your columns to call the attention of the business men, the merchants and the bankers, to the importance of the North Carolina Drainage Convention, which is to meet here the 22nd and 23rd, Tuesday and Wednesday. We earnestly request that every man, especially the bankers and wholesalers, attend these meetings as far as possible, as it will be an eye-opener to the most sanguine. When we realize that Wilmington is the base of a territory where there is more rich land capable of the highest production of any city to be found, and since we have adopted a State-wide drainage law similar to those that have made Iowa, Indiana, Illinois, the Dakotas and other Western States immensely wealthy, there is no reason why Wilmington's territory cannot become to be one of the richest in the South. Every community that has undrained lands and wish to drain same can form themselves into a corporation under the State drainage law and after the engineers, whom the government will furnish free, gives an estimate of the cost of the construction of the work, then they can issue bonds to run 13 years, and each man is assessed according to the number of acres of land he has and benefits derived. The bonds draw 6 per cent. interest. There is no safer investment to be had as the bonds constitute first mortgage on the land, and while the bonds amount to 10 to 25 per cent. of the original valuation of the land, yet as the land is improved the risk to the bond holder diminishes and it can be safely estimated that for a 20 per cent. investment the bond holders have 100 per cent. security against a 20 per cent. loan, and it does seem that the banker or money lender could have no safer investment and at the same time he could not put his money where he would get a greater return for himself and community than to invest in drainage bonds. It would not only mean a greater agricultural interest, but it would mean better roads as drainage is as absolutely necessary for good roads as for better agricultural interest, and will solve, to a greaet extent, the "Notty" problem of transportation.

Respectfully,

B. F. KEITH.

CONGRESS OF REFRIGERATION.

Third International Convention to be Held in United States.

The Second International Congress of the Refrigerating Industries, which has just closed a successful meeting at Vienna, Austria, decided to hold the next, or Third International Congress, in the United States in 1913. This will offer a great opportunity to all those in the United States who are interested in closer commercial relations with other countries in those products that are best handled at low temepratures. It will enable them to meet experts from many foreign countries, and probably many representatives of foreign governments.

It will enable the refrigerating engineers and experts in this country to meet men engaged in similar pursuits in other countries, and learn from them in what way many of the ordinary or extraordinary difficulties in the construction and operation of refrigerating plants are met or overcome in other lands. It will offer opportunity to exchange experiences with those who have studied refrigerating problems from standponits somewhat different from those which obtain in America, and learn of the results of investigations made by the scientists of the old world. It is possible to learn more from such association, because the intellect is sharpened by the unusual conditions and the high expectations aroused.

The burden of responsibility for suitably entertaining the refrigerating experts of the world is no light one. However, so many departments of commerce and industry are directly or indirectly interested in the science and practical application, in one form or another, of artificial refrigeration, that assistance from most, if not all, branches of industry may be expected. The educational value of such an international convention will appeal to many. And in no other way can they be so sure of obtaining the largest possible results, as they can be by membership in the American Association of Refrigeration.

In order to emphasize the merit of the Galveston commission plan of government, to give an idea how it works and to contrast the conditions elsewhere, a City Commission Congress will be held in Galveston, November 21-23. The National Municipal League, which has taken a prominent part in charter work and improved forms of municipal government, will have representatives present.

Reliable Laxative for Old People Given Free

Life is so arranged that there is a close resemblance between infancy and old age. By this is not meant the mental but the physical faculties. For example, the organ of digestion is the most difficult thing the child has to contend with, as it is that of the old person.

When a person gets past middle life his power of digestion decreases, and continues to grow weaker, and for that reason so many old people are habitually constipated. They try everything recommended from hot water to strong cathartics without avail. Now, if there is any one thing a person of advanced years should not take it is a cathartic. The bowels cannot stand it. What is required is a mild, gentle, non-griping liquid laxative.

You have it exactly as required in Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, which stands today, after a generation, as the ideal remedy for old people, women, children and all others who require a mild, natural remedy. We could give the names of thousands of old people who use nothing else but Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, among them Mr. A. A. Lewis of Bentonville, Ark., and Mr. Enon Gilpin of Danville, Ill.

They first sent to Dr. Caldwell for a free sample bottle, which every reader is invited to do, and then, having tested it and found it satisfactory, they bought it of their druggist at fifty cents and one dollar a bottle. Their words of public praise should prompt the present reader to at least send for a sample bottle. It costs nothing. Results are absolutely guaranteed or money will be refunded.

Dr. Caldwell does not feel that the purchase of his remedy ends his obligation. He has specialized in stomach, liver and bowel diseases for over forty years and will be pleased to give the reader any advice on the subject free of charge. All are welcome to write him. Whether for the medical advice or the free sample address him Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 541 Caldwell Building, Monticello, Ill.
